

GYMKHANA AND POLO TOMORROW FOR EAST HAMPTON AMBULANCE

Polo Game Between 6th Field Artillery and East Hampton to Start at 2:30: To be Followed by Equestrian Events, Steeple Chase, Jumping, Sack and Potato Races, Etc. Proceeds will be Used to Buy East Hampton Ambulance.

Arrangements for the Gymkhana are progressing favorably and with good weather success is assured. The polo game will start promptly at 2:30, to be followed by various events on horse back, such as jumping, steeple chase, Gretna Green race and many others too numerous to mention. Then there will be many added attractions—express wagon race, three-legged race, sack race, hoop race, geese race, obstacle race, and a cake walk in costume, and a steeple chase race. Mr. Alyward has presented a cup for first prize in the steeple chase race and Robert Appleton has presented a second prize for the competition for children between the ages of five and ten and ten and fifteen. Prizes have been given by Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Fish. The polo association has purchased eight cups to be given as prizes and blue and red ribbons will be given as first and second prizes in all other events.

Read the following directions for Ambulance Day:

1. The games are held at the polo grounds on Further lane.
2. The polo game will start at 2:30 p. m.
3. Parking spaces are reserved for those who pay at least five dollars.
4. All the money received except the absolute expenses will be devoted to the purchase and maintenance of as fine an ambulance as the funds will permit.
5. The present parking spaces numbering from one to fifty on the west side (entrance side) are indicated by a red card; the extra spaces added are indicated by a white card having the letter A before the number.
6. Spaces on the east side are represented by a green card numbered from fifty-one to 100. Added spaces are indicated by a buff card having the letter B before the number.
7. Those holding admission tickets only but coming to the games in automobiles should park their cars in the field directly opposite the present exit and walk into the grounds through that exit.
8. As no one will be allowed to stand in front of those holding parking space it is suggested that it would be advisable to bring lap robes to put on the ground to sit on, as the ambulance is not yet ready to take away anyone catching cold.
9. The committee in charge would recommend a careful reading of the above instructions to facilitate the easy handling of the crowd expected.
10. Do not find fault if your space is not to your liking, as the committee has done its best to give every one as good a seat as possible.
11. If you have not already received your parking space cards you will get them at the entrance gate.

FATHERS AND SONS

On Saturday morning, Sept. 10, at 10 o'clock the annual fathers' and sons' base ball game of the East Hampton Boys' club will be held at the playground. This interesting event will be followed by the presentation of the prize, which consists of four Founder's cups, to be presented to the boys who were most proficient in general athletics, tennis, aquatics and best improvement. A cup for handicapped tennis singles, medals for perfect attendance, medal for character, improvement, physical improvement, best camper, high scorer on field day, high scorer at swimming meet. Every boy who scores a first place in any official athletic or swimming event is awarded the club E. The club is divided in two teams, Red team, captained by Howard Adams; Blue team, captained by Gail Borden. All members of the team which scores the most points during the season are awarded the club pin.

The club has held an unusually busy season, with over-night camping parties at Montauk, hikes, bicycle hikes, war games at Three Mile Harbor, athletic meets and tests, aquatics, tennis tournaments, base ball basket ball, soccer foot ball, etc.

A number of boys successfully passed the American Red Cross beginner's test, swimmer's test, and junior life saving test.

All parents and friends are invited to attend the base ball game and award of prizes on Saturday, Sept. 10, time, 10 o'clock sharp.

INSPECT CLINTON ACADEMY MON.

E. H. H. S. to Hold Public Reception

MONDAY, SEPT. 5, 11 TILL 6

Hall to be Used for Literary, Artistic and Educational Purposes.

The work of restoring Clinton Academy to its original state now being about completed, the East Hampton Historical Society, Inc., which is to lease the property for a term of ninety-nine years, will hold a public reception at the academy next Monday, Sept. 5th, from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m., to which everybody is cordially invited to come. There will be some of the directors of the society present during the entire period, who will be pleased to show the visitors around the place. On the ground floor is a hall, which for a nominal sum may be used for meetings for literary, artistic and educational purposes. A pantry and facilities for cooking have been installed on this floor. The south room upstairs will eventually become an art gallery, where paintings by artists identified with East Hampton will be on exhibition, and the north room is to be used as a museum for the preservation and display of objects of historical interest. The attic has been left in its original condition, and its walls bear the initials of many students at the old academy.

The directors of the society will give a private reception to the charter members of the society this afternoon. Membership in the Historical Society will be open to all at the reception and thereafter, and everyone is welcome to join. The annual dues will be $1.00.

VAN NORMAN PREFERS S. S. DEATH CELL

James Van Norman, who remained in the death house at Sing Sing for more than a month following the decision of the Court of Appeals granting him a new trial, was brought back to Suffolk county on Saturday. Van Norman could have left Sing Sing the day following the decision of the court, but he said he preferred to remain in the death house rather than to return to Riverhead, where he said he was watched all the time. Van Norman was condemned to death for the murder of Wilbur Severance, one of the party of crooks picked up at Huntington some months ago.

"PARTY" ELIMINATED

Local telephone operators have bid farewell to the word "party" as used with telephone numbers having "J," "M," "R" or "W" appendages and telephone users are asked to follow the operators' example in dropping the word.

Now when you want a party-line number, simply say "one-two-three-W" or whatever it is.

Omitting this word saves a great deal of time in completing telephone calls, and that counts in the day's long run, for it enables you to get your "party" quicker.

On the basis of 5,000 party-line telephone calls daily some demon statistician in the New York Telephone Company has figured out that if one second is saved each time the word "party" is omitted, it would mean a combined saving of time equal to about four days in every twenty-four hours. Which is one way to beat old Tempus Fugit.

SHARKS SCARE BATHERS

Great was the consternation among the bathers at Southampton beach last week, when a shark appeared just outside the safety line and several men who ventured out that far did some wonderful swimming in getting back to shore.

The beach lifesavers, Frederick Lundholm, Robert Arrison and Theodore Sandburg, quickly manned the lifeboat and chased the shark which they caught in a net and brought to the shore. The shark was about five feet long, of the man-eating variety, known as a blue nose. The life savers killed the monster and it was viewed by crowds of men and women as it lay on the beach. This is the first shark of the blue nose variety seen along this shore in recent years.

IMPROVE GREENWICH OYSTER BAY FERRY

Big Ferry "Mount Morris" can Unload 600 Passengers and 30 Autos in 10 Minutes.

Many improvements have been effected at both docks of the Greenwich-Oyster Bay Ferry across Long Island Sound, for better handling of passengers and vehicles, so that the big ferry "Mount Morris" is now enabled to unload and load 600 passengers and thirty automobiles in less than ten minutes. Also, there is no longer any height limit on cars, as the new bridge on the Greenwich dock handles cars direct to and from the open forward deck, without necessitating a trip through the boat, where the headroom is only seven feet.

On the Greenwich end of the ferry, foot passengers now leave the boat on an overhead bridge from the upper deck right out to the street, which eliminates the former danger of accident when passengers and autos all mingled on the one bridge. Passengers coming aboard, now wait on the new deck alongside the boat, so that there is never any conflict of traffic going and coming.

The present schedule of the ferry, leaving Greenwich at 9, 11:30, 2, 4:30 and 7 o'clock and Oyster Bay at 10, 12:30, 3, 5:30 and 8 will be maintained until Sunday, October 9, inclusive, after which but three round trips will be made daily until Long Island Sound traffic closes. The ferry has not missed a single day since a heavy easterly storm tied up the boat two days the last week in June.

HOME FIRES

This is the season for forest fires. "Fire is the greatest menace to the forest," says a bulletin issued by the New York State College of Forestry. Fires destroy the reservoir formed by the trees and the spongy forest floor that regulates the water supply of creeks and rivers. Forest fires make dry river beds in summer and ruinous floods in wet seasons. Forest fires desolate the beauty of the landscape and rob man of one of life's most ennobling influences. Every forest fire increases the cost of shelter, clothing, food and fuel. They lay waste the recreation places of the people making for weakened man-energy. No one cares to take an outing in a blackened and burned-over country where only bugs and insects thrive and disease reigns.

A fire in the forest not only kills flowers and trees but fish and game animals which furnish food and sport to thousands of people, and birds which make agriculture possible. A fire in the forest often costs human life. When you are in or near the forest think what it means to you and your family's families for all time. You are careful in your own home with fires. Why not in the forest where you live part of the time; where the health and recreation you cannot get in your home is to be found? Homes, churches and school-houses are built from timber that grows in the forest. Remember, forests are not insured. Remember, every burned acre boosts the cost of buildings of every description, paper and all wood products. Remember, burned timberland pays no wages.

Build your campfire near water, sheltered from wind, free from contact with underbrush, living or dead. Build your campfire on ground cleared of moss, rotten wood and leaf mold. The lakeshore or the pebbly bank of a stream is a good place. Build a small fire. Guides and real woodsmen always build a very small fire for cooking and camping purposes. A big fire is unnecessarily dangerous and of no use to you. Be absolutely sure your campfire is out and thoroughly soaked with water before leaving it. Use care, not only while camping, but while riding automobile, railway train or walking—be sure matches, cigars and cigarettes are out before you throw them away. You wouldn't throw lighted matches into gasoline; why throw them into the forest which is a much more serious matter—you can get more gasoline.

It is a stupid kind of arson to throw fire into the forest. Every forest fire is money out of your own pocket. A fire in the woods is a greater disaster than a fire in your neighbor's dwelling or your home—that is only a private inconvenience. A building can be replaced. A badly burned forest is a public disaster. On such devastated land the forest can never be replenished because the productive soil has burned up and man never can find pleasure there again, nor the sickly, health. There is a stronger moral obligation not to set a forest fire than there is not to set a fire under a person's home. Do the same in the forest as you would in the city. Don't set fires. In the woods you are in honor bound not to destroy life or any of its essentials but to preserve it. If you see a fire, put it out. If you can't

MAY EMPLOY TRAINED WORKER

Suffolk Poultrymen Consider Proposition

CORNELL IN CO-OPERATION

College to Work with Long Island Poultrymen. To Employ Trained Worker

There are now approximately fifty poultrymen on Long Island who have signed their intention and desire to co-operate on the Poultry Farm Management Project which calls for the employment the year round of a trained worker from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. The chairman and secretary of the county poultry committee following the discussions on the part of the poultrymen in the county, are submitting a plan for the approval of those poultrymen who are to co-operate on the project. The fifty poultrymen in Nassau and Suffolk counties, who represent approximately 45,000 hens seem almost unanimously in favor of raising a $4,000 budget in order to provide a substantial salary and to meet other expenses. According to information from the poultry department at Ithaca, there are very few men adequately trained and fitted for this type of work, at the present time. R. C. Ogle, who has so successfully carried forward similar work with poultrymen in the Hudson Valley is being considered as one of the best men available for the work.

The entire project is a joint one, the poultry department at Cornell co-operating with the poultrymen of Long Island. The college is in position to pay $1300 toward the salary of the man who is employed, leaving the remainder of the budget or $2700 to be raised by the fifty poultrymen. The way in which the $2700 is to be raised rests with these poultrymen, themselves. The plan which has been recommended as a feasible one for dividing the cost is as follows:

1. An initial fee of $20 for the first 100 birds or less.
2. Five cents per bird for all in addition to the first hundred and up to 1,000.
3. Ten dollars for each additional 500 birds or less up to 3,000.
4. Fifteen dollars for each additional 1,000 birds or less above 3,000.

This would mean that a man with 500 birds would invest $40 in the project, a man with 1,000 birds, $65; one with 2,000 birds, $85, and one with 4,000 birds $120.

The following Suffolk county poultrymen have definitely agreed to undertake the project: C. S. Shannon, Eastport, 1500 hens; A. W. Willis, East Moriches, 1,100 hens; John Bullen, Westhampton, 1,600 hens; John E. Murray, Moriches, 1,100 hens; Edw. M. Tuttle, East Moriches, 150 hens; Kirkup Brothers, Mattituck, 1,800 hens; Thomas L. Holmes, Riverhead, 100 hens; W. B. Schweimler, Calverton, 100 hens; A. W. Davis, Mt. Sinai, 500 hens; D. W. Hallock, Rocky Point, 500 hens; G. McKessan Brown, Huntington, 300 hens; Shamrock Farms, Huntington, 500 hens; J. F. Rankin, Huntington, 50 hens; R. M. Rubie, Greenlawn, 500 hens; Sand Hill Farms, Huntington, 500 hens; Walter Jennings, Cold Spring Harbor, 400 hens; H. F. Hendrickson, Bridgehampton, 1,500 hens; H. L. Pleasant, Sag Harbor, 2,000 hens; C. H. Osborne, Southampton, 1,200 hens; Robt. J. Dayton, East Hampton, 400 hens; F. S. Stratton, East Hampton, 800 hens; J. C. Haeder, East Hampton, 275 hens; R. C. Halsey, Water Mill, 250 hens.

In addition to these the following have signified that they will undertake the project under certain conditions, some of which it is difficult to determine before it is known who will undertake the project:

J. W. Angell, East Setauket; Lone Pine Poultry Farm, Medford; James Kehoe, Medford; W. Matts, Medford; R. G. Frampton, Lake Grove; Harold Gould, Lake Grove; Jules Francis, Westhampton; W. H. Payne, Huntington Station; H. G. Weikert, Hauppauge; D. J. O'Neill, Babylon; C. T. Ludlow, Bridgehampton; W. H. Hand, East Hampton.

A UNIQUE SIGN

A unique and appropriate sign in the shape of a huge milk bottle has been placed in front of the Hard-scrabble Dairy on Newtown lane. This bottle, built by E. M. Gay and entered by Mr. Dayton on a decorated float in the Fourth of July parade has the same dimensions, proportionately, as a quart milk bottle. It even shows a good amount of cream at the top. This is a sign that attracts attention and will be held in the mind of one seeing it for years.

SUFFOLK TO ISSUE HIGHWAY BONDS

$314,000 Worth of 5 1/2 Per Cent Bonds to Pay for Highway Work.

The supervisors have voted to issue $314,000 worth of 5 1/2 per cent bonds to pay the county's share of several highways that are now in course of construction or repair. The bonds will be for $1,000 each, dated Oct. 1, 1921, sixteen to be retired each year, beginning with Oct. 1, 1922, until 1941, when the last ten of the bonds will be mature.

With the new issue added Suffolk will have a total bonded debt of $1,107,500, of which $897,500 will be for highways.

It was voted to refund to the Roman Catholic church in Smithtown $95.65 paid in taxes that should not have been levied, the board learns, because the property on which the taxes were paid has been used entirely for religious purposes.

Thomas J. Brennan, of the Long Island Railroad's committee of safety, asked the board to see to it that the growth of trees near railroad crossing signs is trimmed so the signs will not be obscured. In the latter county, he declared, there was one crossing warning obscured by a large private sign.

Report from county treasurer showing amount of all moneys received from secretary of state for the registration of motor vehicles for period August 2, 1920, to and ending August 8, 1921, amount $40,821.74.

Report of finance committee, to which was referred the matter of apportioning the moneys available under Sec. 320A and 320B of the highway law and the moneys received from the motor vehicle tax fees, shows in the aggregate $158,001.74, and for which your committee respectfully submits the following tabulation:

East Hampton	$ 9,396.35
Southampton	22,137.77
Shelter Island	2,592.99
Southold	11,085.07
Riverhead	7,665.77
Brookhaven	27,696.28
Islip	30,677.76
Babylon	10,349.07
Huntington	28,122.61
Smithtown	8,288.07

MISS FENNER RESIGNS AS SUPT. OF HOSPITAL

Miss Elizabeth Fenner, who succeeded Miss Alice Lodge as superintendent of the Southampton hospital last spring, informed a representative of the Southampton Times last week that she had tendered her resignation. She also stated that Miss Kennedy, the housekeeper, had resigned. Miss Fenner refused to make any further comment on her resignation nor would she give her reasons for severing her connection with the hospital.—Southampton Times.

LONG ISLAND NOTES

A large barn on the rear of the property of Mrs. Mortimer Baylis, on the north side of Lake street, near Patchogue Lake, was totally destroyed by fire at 10:30 Wednesday night, with a loss of about $3,000, with only $300 insurance.

According to railroad reports, $12,000,000 worth of lumber has been received on Long Island during the past eight months.

State milk inspectors are busy making tests in Suffolk County.

Lawyer Percy L. Housel, who lately bought a tract of land on Main street, east of the railroad crossing, is studying plans preparatory to building a new home for his own occupancy.—Riverhead News.

Miss Katherine W. Reeve, of Greenport, Mrs. Edith L. Russell, of Quogue, and Miss Sara Petty, of Riverhead, have been appointed the Press committee of Yennicott chapter, Daughters of the Revolution.

No. 1, Vol. 1, of The Furrow, a 32-page monthly magazine, published by the New York State Institute of Applied Agriculture at Farmingdale, is out. As its name implies it is published in the interest of the institute and its students, and it fulfills its mission admirably in the initial number. Miss Grace Tabor, of Huntington, is the managing editor.

The fall meeting of the Long Island Presbytery will meet in Mattituck, Tuesday, September 13, commencing at 10:30 a. m. Heretofore the Presbytery has convened in the afternoon for a two days' session. By meeting in the morning it is expected to complete its business in one day.

LEGENDS OF WHIPPOORWILL HOLLOW The Death Blow

BY GEAN FINCH BARNES

Among the early races of the red men in America, the Indians of Paumanack were as quick to resent an injury as any of the other numerous tribes that lived along the eastern coast of this continent, and nothing so incensed an aborigine as a violation of his person, and nothing would satisfy the humiliated one but a "duel unto death" of one or the other of the contending parties. There is a story that once upon a time, as an Indian maid of the High Hills was being courted by two young braves, the rejected one insulted the favored suitor by publicly striking him in the face with the flat blade of his tomahawk.

Upon being forbidden by the Sachem to resent the humiliation within the bounds of the Indian village, the injured one quietly challenged the other party to a "duel unto death," outside of the boundaries of the High Hills.

So down from the high lands and past the flat meadows, and along by a fertile plain came the combatants. There, in a grassy hollow, surrounded by a thicket of small trees of many varieties, was the secluded spot that was to be the scene of a mortal combat, a struggle unto death, that would be one more marker for the future of this old historic hollow.

In these primitive quarrels of the red men the combatants were quickly covered with blood upon their heads and their bodies, for it was a strike, a cut and a slash fight with the sharpest of stone knives, and the quickest eye, the longest reach, and the most agile body won out; and the horrible duel would be kept up until one or the other would be too weak to parry the blow that drove him to his knees and also drove the knife way into the body up to the hilt.

Now long before this the maiden fair, awaiting her lover back at the High Hills, suspected some evil doings, and upon questioning some little lads, that were playing around the village, received for an answer their gravely nodding heads, and their little fingers pointing toward the west.

Losing no time she sent the small boys to find her two brothers, and snatching a bag of herbs and appliances from her mother's lodge, turned her face toward the setting sun, and was down and beyond the low meadows before her kinsmen had received word of the fray.

The sun was slowly sinking as she entered the grassy plains that fronted the Indian well, and her eyes were turned to every cleared spot as she strode along and her ears were listening for a sound that would not blend with the fair spot of nature. Silently but swiftly she sped along by the sandy dunes, and there, upon the quiet air, she heard a cry that instinctively made her place her hand to her heart, it was the calling, calling of the whippoorwill from the hollow, telling her that she was too late on her mission, for by the constant repetition of the mournful note of the bird she realized that one or both had passed on before and entered the Spirit Land.

Turning her quickening steps toward the sacred grove she soon found both warriors stretched out on the velvety green sward, one still in death and the other, her beloved, bleeding his life away. It was then that the medical lore of the old squaws came in play, for it is a known fact, that it was not the medicine men who were the real doctors of the tribe, the Indian women, who, with their knowledge of herbs and crude surgery, saved many a wounded warrior, and healed many a sick and diseased body.

By tying a ligature of deer skin cut from her fringed skirts, she stopped the bleeding of the artery, and long before her brothers appeared upon the scene she was rewarded by the wounded man opening his eyes and calling for water.

Tenderly bidding him not to stir, she sped to the famous "well of good drinking water" and filled a dried, inflated bladder from the clear, cool spring and brought it back to the grassy hollow and pressed it to the lips of the now reviving warrior. Soon, two stern looking young Indians appeared at her side in the grove, and stepping across the green sward silently rolled over the body of the dead duelist to ascertain that he had really passed away, and still without a word, they picked up the dead body and started for the watering hole that lay just north of the Hollow, which was the haunt of the wild animals in which the nearby woods abounded. But the maiden, now that she knew her lover lived, begged her brothers not to cast the dead man into the pond, as the spirit would not rest if the earthly body was cast into the water.

So a shallow grave was dug in the cleared rise of ground immediately back of this watering place and the slain warrior, with his crude implements of war by his side, was laid to rest just as the whippoorwill in the hollow ceased his mournful cries.

Many years after, when the early Colonials were looking about to locate a spot for their "God's Acre," it was a strange destiny that led them to select this identical spot for the ground in which to lay their beloved dead, and it was still more strange that the first grave dug on that hillside brought to light the skeleton of an Indian chief with his knives and war clubs by his side.

But to return to our wounded warrior—He was too badly injured to be moved from the Hollow, so a little shelter was soon erected by the brothers of the Indian maid, and deftly patched with the rushes with which the land then abounded and they made all provisions and comforts for their sister and the wounded brave before returning to the High Hills, and it was many days before the sick man was able to be carried to his eastern hills by the faithful maiden's kin, who through all the long tedious convalescence, each day appeared at the hollow with food and comforts for the wounded man and his faithful attendant.

So here in this grassy hollow, sheltered by the thickly entwined trees, lulled by the song of the ocean, healed by the gathered herbs of the plain and tenderly watched over by the maiden of his heart's desire, the young brave was slowly brought back to health, happiness and love, in this ancient and historic hollow which the aborigine claimed was guarded by the night birds that held the souls of their tribe who had been massacred by an alien race.

FINE OVERLOADED TRUCKS

The campaign suggested by Benjamin G. Halsey, of West Hampton, chairman of the Supervisors' Road Committee, to save the roads in Suffolk that have cost the county thousands of dollars; and which it is claimed, are being demolished by the excessive loading of great motor trucks, is being vigorously pushed this week.

Already three or more drivers of overloaded trucks have been punished by fines in the western part of the county, and more arrests are expected.

The State Highway Department has sent its weighing outfit to the county, at Mr. Halsey's request, and when the big trucks come along they are stopped and weighed. If an overload is found the drivers are taken at once to court. Under the law a truck is allowed to carry up to 25,000 pounds, including the weight of the truck itself. Many trucks are found, it is said, that have a combined weight of more than 30,000 pounds, or fifteen tons.

C. P. Smith, of Riverhead, the Sealer of Weights and Measures, is assisting in the work the state is doing to help preserve the roads.

People like it so much the state college of agriculture had to have another edition—F 137 on "The Dairy Herd." A copy is yours for the asking.

CHORAL EVENSONG

There will be a musical service of distinction at Christ church, Sag Harbor, on Sunday, Sept. 4, at 7:30 p. m. Francis Moore, of New York, will preside at the organ. The prelude will be from the "New World Symphony," and the postlude, Kinder's March. Miss Lillian Warren will sing "Oh for the wings of a dove," Mendelssohn; Charles Albert Case, "Be then faithful unto death," S. Paul, Mendelssohn; Mrs. Arthur Williston, "Come unto Him" from Handel's "Messiah." The offertory will be Boellmann's "Prelude," Mrs. Williston and Miss Warren will sing Mendelssohn's, "I waited for the Lord," the choir, Woodman's, "Thy mercy oh Lord." The offering at this service will be for the choir fund.

JEKYLL & HYDE IN SAG HARBOR

Edward Waldmann, well-known New York actor, will appear at Athenaeum hall, on Labor day, Monday, Sept. 5, for the benefit of the Knights of Columbus, in Stevenson's thrilling four act drama, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," supported by the most prominent Sag Harbor local talent, including Frank Geisler, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Dalzell, Cyrus Hart, Peter Hughes, Gordon Harris, Chas. Gilbride, Nelson Gardner, Mrs. M. Gates, Miss Rosalind O'Halloran, Miss Miriam Burns and Mrs. Corinne Kelly. Music will be furnished by Imperial orchestra.

ALONE FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS

Indian Woman, Abandoned on Desert Island, Finally Found by Party of Otter Hunters.

On San Nicholas Island, which is uninhabited, a party of sea-otter hunters, landing to chance their luck, found, to their amazement, the imprint of human feet on the sandy shore—imprints freshly made. They scattered in search. But, the wind shifting and commencing to blow hard, they had to regain their vessel before the maker of the marks could be found. It was undeniable, however, a human being lived on this bleak, wind-blown island of sand and tall brushwood.

On returning to the mainland they reported the strange discovery, but nothing was done until a Roman Catholic priest was so moved by the news that he persuaded the captain of a small schooner to sail with him for San Nicolas. After two days' searching he discovered this lonely Crusoe—the first of a new kind. For he found inside a low hut of driftwood a woman more like a beast than a person.

She was clad in otter skins, and the feathered skins of the sea-fowl, and her companion was an otter, which she had caught very young and tamed.

The priest with difficulty got her story, for she had almost forgotten how to speak. Many years previously the small tribe of Indians to which she belonged—inhabitants of San Nicolas from time past—had been shifted by the government to the mainland. As they were being taken on board, her baby had fallen into the sea, and she had leaped after him, and in the dusk had been given up as drowned. She reached the shore, however, to find the child was dead. In utter loneliness she had lived there for 18 years.

NO RELIEF EVEN IN DEATH

Profiteering Claimed to Have Spread to the Undertaker and the Cemetery Manager.

Exploitation even at the side of the grave! Birth has long been regarded as a costly occasion, sometimes the occasion of profiteering. Diseases during infancy afford further opportunities for taking advantage of people's ignorance. Child labor and other ills seize upon the youth almost before he enters adolescence, and fraudulent schemes of education may carry him into maturity. Adult life, of course, is a long stretch of abuses. Our food, our shelter, our clothes, our leisure—somewhere we are almost certain to pay the penalty of living; many of us even regard ourselves as underpaid. If we attempt to fly from these demands of exorbitant the loan shark grins outside the door. Old age creeps upon us with leering malevolence. From the cradle onward we are harried. And now comes death to add its finishing touch of trickery, writes Winthrop D. Lane in the Literary Review of Quincy L. Dowd's "Funeral Management and Costs." St. Paul's question has been answered. The sting of death lies in its cost; the victory of the grave belongs to the undertaker and the cemetery manager. "We bargain for the graves we lie in."

Americans Killed With Escadrille.
There were twelve young Americans who gave up their lives for France while flying with the Lafayette escadrille or squadron. To perpetuate their names and memory a memorial tablet was modeled by a French artist at Sevres, France, in 1919, and executed under the direction of Sidney B. Velt, secretary of the foreign service committee of the Aero Club of America. The Lafayette squadron won imperishable fame by its success in aerial combats with enemy planes, of which no fewer than 190 were brought down by this organization alone. The names on the tablet: Norman Barclay, Julian Biddle, Andrew Courtney Campbell, Jr., Oliver Chadwick, Victor Chapman, Edmond Genet, Ronald Hoskier Douglas, McMonigal, James McConnell, Norman Prince, Kiffin Rockwell.

Richest Americans.

An investigation of millionaires by a New York newspaper correspondent includes the following as among the richest Americans: John D. Rockefeller, George F. Baker, Henry Ford, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, the Wideners, George Eastman, J. B. Duke, Pierre S. Dupont, Julius Rosenwald, Vincent Astor, Edward H. R. Green, J. Ogden Armour, the Vanderbilts, Thomas Fortune Ryan, Daniel Guggenheim, the Harknesses, Louis F. Swift, Charles M. Schwab, Cyrus H. McCormick, J. P. Morgan, the Bradys, E. T. Stotesbury the Prettas, the Dodge estate, Andrew W. Mellon.

Whale of a Fish Story.

"It's a whale," more than one visitor asserted who visited Monk's wharf here recently. They were wrong. It was a sturgeon. From the tip of its tail to its snout it measured just 13 feet, and it weighed 988 pounds. This monster fish was taken with a drift net in the Pitt river by an Indian fisherman, and is said to be the second largest ever taken.—New Westminster Correspondence Toronto Globe.

Noah's Oversight.

"Don't forget to feed and water the canary birds," said Mrs. Meekton as she started for the train.

"I won't, Henrietta," replied Leonard; "though I can't help wishing sometimes that Noah, when planning to perpetuate animal life, had decided to leave canary birds out of the ark."

The New Santa Barbara Light.

Many persons are still fond of the oil lamp to read by at home. In the house it still gives the amount of brilliancy desired. But lighting engineers claim superiority for the electric light in a fog.

An electric light of 1,000,000 candle-power is to be installed in the Santa Barbara lighthouse. The light itself is not 1,000,000 candle-power, but the light is intensified by the use of reflectors ingeniously cut and placed. In clear weather the light will not be visible any further than the old oil lamp, which shines 20 miles. The light is 178 feet above sea level and 20 miles is the horizon limit. But in foggy weather the new light will be visible two or three miles in place of one mile, the limit of the oil lamp's beams.

"Fuel for Nothing."

The case of a motor ship that trades between Europe and America without having to pay for fuel is mentioned by Motor Ship. The Buenos Aires, running between San Francisco and Scandinavia, loads up with 1,500 tons of fuel oil at San Francisco, sells 900 tons at Stockholm, and returns to America with some oil left in her tanks, having used 600 tons out of the 1,500 tons of her supply in her engines. She pays 7,500 pounds for her oil in San Francisco and sells 800 tons of it at Stockholm for 8,000 pounds. The fuel is carried mostly in the double bottom, and therefore does not detract from the ship's cargo-carrying capacity.

*Says the dealer—
"Less carbon"*

"SOME motorists have a lot of trouble with carbon. Believe me, there would be less knocking on hills, fewer scratched cylinder walls, and less spark plug fouling, if everybody would use Socony Gasoline."

"It has taken nearly two generations of refiners to produce Socony, but when you have it in your tank, you know you are right."

"It's all clean power, no waste, full mileage, quick starting. Always pure. Always uniform."

ALONE FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS

Indian Woman, Abandoned on Desert Island, Finally Found by Party of Otter Hunters.

On San Nicholas island, which is uninhabited, a party of sea-otter hunters, landing to chance their luck, found, to their amazement, the imprint of human feet on the sandy shore—imprints freshly made. They scattered in search. But, the wind shifting and commencing to blow hard, they had to regain their vessel before the maker of the marks could be found. It was undeniable, however, a human being lived on this bleak, wind-blown island of sand and tall brushwood.

On returning to the mainland they reported the strange discovery, but nothing was done until a Roman Catholic priest was so moved by the news that he persuaded the captain of a small schooner to sail with him for San Nicolas. After two days' searching he discovered this lonely Crusoe—the first of a new kind. For he found inside a low hut of driftwood a woman more like a beast than a person.

She was clad in otter skins, and the feathered skins of the sea-fowl, and her companion was an otter, which she had caught very young and tamed.

The priest with difficulty got her story, for she had almost forgotten how to speak. Many years previously the small tribe of Indians to which she belonged—inhabitants of San Nicolas from time past—had been shifted by the government to the mainland. As they were being taken on board, her baby had fallen into the sea, and she had leaped after him, and in the dusk had been given up as drowned. She reached the shore, however, to find the child was dead. In utter loneliness she had lived there for 18 years.
