DEATHS FROM STARVATION.

Seventy-seven deaths from starvation have occurred in London during the past year. These are the official figures furnished by the coroners who have held inquests on the victims. Probably, if we could know the number who die from starvation, but concerning whose deaths no inquiries are held, the figures would be much higher. Out of the seventy seven known victims rather more than half were women or girls. Among them were the two poor old sisters, Charlotte Rosseau and Bessie Rosseau, whom the five shillings they received from the parish could not keep alive. The inhaling of foul air, combined with the want of meat and drink, brought them to their death on one day. One victim, an old woman, is described as "a miser," and perhaps she may have added self-neglect to poverty. One schoolmistress, Annie Vaux, was starved to death in the seventy-fifth year of her age. As a rule, the women were charwomen, "milliners," flower-girls, or "of unknown occupation." One was the widow of a solicitor. She was very old, seventy-eight, and was found dying in the street and taken into the workhouse, where she expired. Here is perhaps the only instance in this record of so complete a fall from the ordinary well-being of the middle classes. The other victims almost all come from the ranks of the worn-out toilers in ill-paid avocations, or, again, the unprovided-for widows of artisans. The death of one man, Nolan, a glass-blower, is said to have been "accelerated by repeated and excessive punishments of bread and water diet." There are thirteen examples of death from starvation and neglect among very young children. On the whole it seems plain that in the state of things thus revealed there is room for the utmost energy of all bodies like the Charity Organisation Society. Let it once by known that a man or a woman is dying for the want of food, and help will come, perhaps in time, perhaps too late. On whose shoulders lies the weight of blame when help comes too tardily, or not at all? Whatever the answer may be, the pain and shame ought to be felt by the consciences of every class in the community.

MONKISH LIFE IN RUSSIA.

A lurid and ghastly light is thrown upon monkish life in Russia by the Molva, a journal published in St Petersburg. In a recent issue it printed an article headed "Monastery Secrets," whence we extract the following strange story, the details of which are stated to be confirmed in every respect by evidence collected in the course of an official inquiry, terminated a few weeks ago. The monks of the Lebiadyn Cloister addressed a petition to the Holy Consistory of their province, complaining of the barbarous and inhuman treatment they have undergone at the hands of their Prior, Father Isidore. This ferocious ecclesiastic, ever since his accession to office, has done little else but torture his subordinate brethren, cuffing, beating, and starving them without mercy. He has thrashed their naked backs with a knotted cudgel, and with a silvern massive crucifix, and caused them to be flogged with rods by "lay brothers," until they have become insensible from pain and loss of blood. He has shut them up in dark cellars, where they have been left without food or water for as long as three successive days and nights at a stretch. One monk was flayed to death by his orders, and two more died of starvation. Two hanged themselves, two drowned themselves, and one cut his throat, driven to despair by his superior's relentless brutality. All these tortures are alleged in the petition to have been inflicted by Father Isidore upon monks who refused to aid him in his licentious habits. The Prior spent the revenues of the brotherhood in every description of debauchery, and any remonstrance on the part of the monks drew down upon them the most horrible punishments. The attention of the Czar is said to have been called to the tragedy of Lebiadyn, and it is expected that his Majesty will order a searching and exhaustive investigation into the actual state of Russian monastic establishments to be instituted as soon as the repressive measures now being enforced to put down the revolutionary movement shall have restored order and tranquility to his empire.

A FEMALE CRUSOE.

The San Francisco Call contains an interesting account of an Indian woman who was accidentally abandoned on San Nicolas Island, off the coast of Southern California, and spent 18 years alone there before she was rescued. The fact of her existence was discovered by a man who went from the mainland to hunt for otters and who found footprints sunk deeply in the ground. He was unable to follow up these indications till nearly three years, when one of a party who accompanied him came suddenly upon the object of their search. She was in a small circular enclosure made of brushwood, about five feet high and six feet in diameter, with a small opening on one side. She was clothed with a garment made of skins of the shag, a species of duck that can neither walk nor fly. This garment reached almost to her ankles when she stood erect. She was sitting cross-legged, skinning seal-blubber with a rude knife made of a piece of hoop-iron driven into a piece of wood. There was no covering on her head, except a thick matted mass of hair, of yellowish brown colour, probably owing to exposure to the sun and the weather; it was short, as if the ends had rotted off. There were some wild dogs on the island, a few of which kept near her, and seemed to regard her as a mistress. She had lived on a plant resembling cabbage, called by Californians palo santo, and a root known by the name of coreomite, also blubber of the various kinds of seals, &c. She had a rude apparatus for catching shellfish, and strong fishing lines made of seal sinews, which seemed to indicate that she fished in the ocean. The expression of her face was pleasing, her features were regular, her complexion much fairer and her form more symmetrical than that of the Indian woman on the adjoining mainland. Some suspect that she belonged to a tribe much further north. She could not understand anything said to her in any of the Indian dialects of South California, but she had a wonderful capacity for conversing by signs. She retained all her teeth, but they were worn low, supposed to be due to her chewing tough and hard articles of food. Her age appeared to be about 50 years. She bowed to all who came near her, greeting them with a smile. She freely accompanied her discoverers to their vessel, but her conduct at once convinced them that she retained the virtue of female modesty. She showed singular dexterity in making water-vessels from grass and asphaltum, a substance which is plentiful both on the island and the mainland. She seemed to recognise various appliances of civilization. She died about seven weeks after reaching the mainland, partly from the effects of a fall, partly from dysentery, brought on by eating fruits and vegetables. Padre Gonzalez, the superior of the mission of Santa Barbara, has sent her dress of shagskins, her basket and implements to Rome, to the Museum of the Propaganda.

LORD NELSON'S PENSION.

HOW IT IS STILL BEING PAID TO PEOPLE WHO HAVE DONE NOTHING TO DESERVE IT.

(From the St Louis Republican.)

In the recently published list of British pensioners we find one of 17,500 dols to Earl Nelson, which has drawn from the Treasury up to the present time the handsome sum of 1,260,000 dols, and unless abolished will continue as long as there is an Earl Nelson to take it. There is an interesting bit of history connected with this pension not generally known.

Nelson was killed at Trafalgar, and Parliament, anxious to honour and reward the man who had won England's greatest naval victory, was somewhat puzzled how to do it. The dead hero left no children, and for several years previous had been separated from his wife and living with Emma, widow of Sir William Hamilton. In his last letter, written a few hours before the battle, he recapitulated the public services of this brilliant and unfortunate woman, and solemnly commended her to the care of his country. In the same letter, we think, he requested that his adopted daughter, Horatio, should assume the name of Nelson. It is believed by many that she was his own child by Lady Hamilton. Certain it is that he wished her to share with the latter the bounty of the nation for which he died. Parliament refused to do anything for either; would not even repay Lady Hamilton the money she had advanced to enable Nelson to provision his fleet on a very important occasion. An Earldom, with the above-mentioned pension, was conferred on Rev William Nelson, D.D., a brother. This gentleman had, while Nelson lived, been on very friendly terms with Lady Hamilton, and even encouraged his daughters to visit her. But no sooner did he reap the benefits of his brother's death than he ceased all communication with her, and, what was still worse, declined to lend her any pecuniary assistance. She was actually obliged to pawn, and finally sell, the coat and vest in which her lover fell. They can be seen, stained with his blood, among the precious relics at Greenwich Hospital. Her debts compelled her to leave England, and she died in 1816, near Calais, in abject pauperism.

It is said that as soon as the news reached him the reverend earl hastened over to Calais, and carried off the few souvenirs which the wretched creature had retained through all her distress. His meanness did not prevent his living to a good age—78, when the title descended to Thomas Bolton, son of Nelson's sister. It is now held by his son, Horatia, born in 1823. We are under the impression—and hope it is correct—that Horatia was cared for by the Nelson family until she attained womanhood. She married, we believe, a naval officer of humble rank, and became very poor. A petition presented to Parliament for her relief was rejected, and not long afterward death placed her beyond the reach of want. Strange and sad, indeed, was the fate of Nelson's darlings, whom he loved so passionately, if so unwisely.

A SCOTCH WITCH STORY.

"Old M'Leod of Girvan, in Ross-shire, you must know, was very intimate with the witches of his time, and especially with the mother of the Mhor Venn; but how, I did not hear whateffer. Well; he was taken very ill. He had been a soldier, and had had a piece of one of his ears shot off in the wars with Napoleon. He was dying before long, and was so ill that one of the M'Leods was sent over to Loch Inver to tell of his approaching death. He had a fery long walk over the hills, and it was a fery rough night—

> 'That night a child might understand
> The deil had business on his hand.'

Well, Sir, at Altnoi (that is, the Long Burn), half way between Inchnadamph and Altnagellagach, some 20 miles up this fery road, he walked over the bridge and heard some one saying, "We'll manage ye, Donald; we'll manage ye; we'll tak' ye.' He turned, and saw two witches sitting in the middle of the road before him, molding an image of clay, which was all stuck over with pins; but, somehow or other, they could never get the tip of the ear, which had been shot off, you know, to stick on to their image. Donald was a fery strong man whateffer, and rushed at them, and knocked them both over. Then he seized their image, and ran with it home to Girvan to M'Leod; for, being witches, they could not cross the running water of the burn. He took it up to the chamber where his master lay, and gave it to him. First they drew out one very big pin from his heart. I mind those big pins well. He was at once much better. Then they took out the smaller ones, one after the other, each giving him greater relief, till at length, on the last one being removed, he was quite well. About the same time, M'Leod one night sent a servant to Dornoch on an errand. The man rather hung back. It was a wild night, and he would have to cross the Tain, which is always a mischancy river, with many dangers round it of ford and evil things. M'Leod noticed his hesitation, and roared out at him, 'Tak' the grey horse, and the deil himself will not stap ye!' He took it with fair misgivings, and rode into the darkness till he reached the ford over the Tain. In the midst of this he found his bridle seized by two witches, one on each side. Says he (for he was very bold), "I have been waiting to see you of this long time." Says they, "and we are fery welcome to see you; all you have to do is to sign your name in blood in this parchment book in the name of the devil." Well, he did not make more ado, but took a pen and pricked himself till the blood came, and then, laying the book open on the saddle before him, was about to write, when all at once he gave the gray a slap behind with his open hand; up he sprang, far in the air, and threw down both witches into the water, and then sprang round and sped home like the wind, while the man held the book tight under his arm. He was soon at M'Leod's house, as you may suppose, and gives him the book. He opens it, and, believe me, Sir" —here it is hopeless to express the mysterious tones and agitated manner of Roderick as he held up his hand, with close set lips and staring eyes—"believe me, Sir, there was the names written therein of all the richest women of Ross-shire. Yes; he had them all down there. M'Leod next proclaimed on the ensuing Sabbath, in the kirk, that if any harm were done to him or his by witches, he should know who had done; and sure enough no harm was ever done him. He was very intimate, sure enough, with the witches. Now when the young men who had murdered the Mhor Venn were seized and taken to prison, nothing could save them. Being, however, clansmen of M'Leod of Girvan, Ross-shire, they managed to send a man to tell him of their plight and ask his help. M'Leod's son met them outside the window of the room in which his father sat, and, after hearing the story, shakes his head and says nothing can be done. His father inside saw this, and hitching up his trousers — they all wore short trousers then—came out and said:—'Yes, it can be done, and it shall be done.' Accordingly he went to the court, and there produced the image and the book, and, of course, they got off at once."—The Cornhill Magazine.

There sailed from the Mersey in May 16,358 persons, an increase of 5441 on April, and of 6469 on May, 1878. In the first five months of this year there have emigrated from Liverpool 12,730 more persons than in the corresponding period of last year.

RANGES! RANGES! RANGES!

T. J. WATTERS, Cooking Range Manufacturer, Kiver's Right-of-way (next Bank of Australasia), Cashel street. 2nd Prize Taker at the A. and P. Association's Show, 1878. Ranges from 2ft 6in to 8ft, fitted with Grills, Circulating Boilers and High-pressure Boilers, by which hot water can be conveyed upstairs for baths and other purposes. Price list:—Ranges 2ft 6in, £4; Ranges, 3ft, with fittings complete, £6 10s; Ranges, 3ft 6in, complete, with cast iron sliding fire-place, £11 10s. Special arrangements for fitting up Hotels, &c. The Christchurch "Press" of November 10, 1878, says:—"The great impetus which has lately been given to the manufacture of stoves and ranges was amply proved by the very large number of exhibits in this class. No less than eighteen ranges were entered for the prize, of all kinds, shapes, and make. The judges awarded the first prize to Messrs Scott Brothers, and second to Mr Watters; but there can be little doubt that their verdict should have been reversed, as Mr Watters' range, for the price, was by far the most complete and best on the ground. The first prize one was priced at £20, without a boiler, but with double oven, and £30 with a boiler. Mr Watters' the contrary, with boiler and good roomy oven, was priced at £11 10s. This also has very good contrivance attached to it, in the shape of a moveable iron fire back, and by means of two handles the fire, when required to be brought forward could be done so." 2795

ONE day I chanced to stroll around
This large and thriving city,
And hundreds were on something bound—
I knew not—what a pity!!!

I followed close, and more and more
I sought for information;
But when we got to George Hyde's store,
Was struck with admiration.

I may just state, without exception,
A sight like this I NEVER saw;
The crowd—they said, "without deception,
They'd tried Hyde's boots and come for more."

Hyde does not wish to make a pile
Out of poor men's feet;
But, as for first-rate fit and style,
With him none can compete.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY!!

GREAT DISCOVERY!

PROFESSOR GUSSCOTT,
Herbalist, Chiropodist, and Curer of Diseases in General,

begs to inform the residents of Dunedin, that he possesses the secret of a GREAT DISCOVERY which has enabled him to obtain Signal Victories over the greatest enemies of man. Philosophers are agreed that Nature is pregnant with secrets which, if known, would Cure Life of all its Ills. Disease is a prolific parent of ills—a "monster" which has more than matched the learning and skill of centuries. Doctors have claimed the exclusive right to deal with diseases, and they have so conspicuously failed as to become proverbial. Napoleon Buonaparte summed up the results of their skill as inimical to Mankind, and as a rule he carefully avoided both Doctors and their Drugs. The imperious Corsican, however, could only speak from the past and from what he observed. He had no idea that in the fullness of time there would arise one PROFESSOR GUSSCOTT, whose skill so omnipotent in curing disease, would be the wonder of his age. The Professor, after years of research, in which Nature's repository was ransacked, at length discovered the KING OF PAIN, and the secret of destroying those monsters which make "wretched" so many of his race. Armed with the darts of Science, dipped in Herbal Juices, the Professor, like the chivalrous knights of feudal times, enters the arena where the monsters of disease love to revel—and now behold him! See the serenity with which confidence invests him! There, feasting on its victims—whose sufferings are hellish—in Dyspepsia and its loathsome brood, whose name is legion. There is Fever, breathing its fiery blast through the veins of the helpless babe. There Consumption, like the fabled Vulture of the Ancients, is eating out the vital organs of its victim, while, with deceitful breath, it promises him life. There is Cholera, fastened on the strong and robust, cramping them in convulsive agonies. While mingled in inextricable confusion, are Disease Fiends of every shape, making the scene hideous with their infernal work. Now the Professor advances, and now his enemies recoil, as one by one they receive a thrust until the last dies—the oppressive stillness of the scene, proclaiming the omnipotence of PROFESSOR GUSSCOTT. The fame of the Professor is abroad throughout the land.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—
Don't misunderstand the Professor, his Medicine kills Disease, while the Pills and Grease, the Mineral Poison, the Epsom Salts, and Chalk Water, fatten Disease.

TESTIMONIALS.

PROFESSOR GUSSCOTT.

SIR,—I have been troubled with nervous debility from my youth. I knew not what was the cause until I had seen your advertisements. I could neither eat nor sleep. For eight years I did not enjoy a good night's rest. My mind was always wandering, I cared for no company, always wished to be alone, always troubled with a violent pain in the head, and a continued palpitation of the heart, my sight diminished, I could scarcely read, and then only for a short time, my memory became so impaired I could not recollect what I had been reading five minutes after I had done. When I wrote to you from Waverley you told me that you could effect a perfect cure and explained all the symptoms that I was suffering from and the cause of it. It gave me confidence to come to Christchurch and place myself under your treatment. I have tried many medical men, but they never fully explained the nature of my complaint. I know there are hundreds of young men suffering the same as I have been and don't know where to apply to. I know many that have written to L. L. Smith, in Melbourne, but received no benefit, but when I came to your place and found the great number that you have been treating with the same complaint, both in town and country, I was satisfied that I had struck the right man. I am happy to say that I am well and hearty and free from all nervousness and palpitation. I can read now for hours, hold conversation, eat and sleep well. I give you this testimonial hoping that it will be beneficial to hundreds of others whose lives I know are miserable to them, as mine has been.—Believe me to be yours ever gratefully,

JOHN NIXON.

PROFESSOR GUSSCOTT.

SIR,—Having suffered from dropsy for upwards of four years, and tried every available means for obtaining relief, I was induced by a lady who lives in the Gasworks' road, and who you were then treating, to apply to you, as all other means had failed. As you were not a doctor I had very little faith in you, but you treated me successfully and I am thankful to be able to bear testimony to the fact that within a month from the date of your undertaking my case I was completely restored to health.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

(Signed) JANE SMITH.

PROFESSOR GUSSCOTT.

SIR,—You asked me to say a good word for you to any of my friends who might have the misfortune to suffer as I did before calling upon you, and I have great pleasure in writing a letter which you are at liberty to publish or use in any way you may think proper. Before I saw you a very long time I had suffered from violent pains between my shoulders, and a feeling as of cold water being poured down my back. I commenced to describe my symptoms to you on my first visit, when you interrupted me by concluding the miserable catalogue of sufferings, so surely that I at once determined to try if your herbal treatment would do more for me than pills and drugs had done. I suppose I had what is commonly called liver complaint. After taking the first bottle of your medicine the pains in my head and region of the heart ceased and I am now quite well. I have recommended all I know who suffer from the same cause to apply to you, and trust that this testimonial may be the means of directing others to try the herbal treatment, which I am convinced is the only effectual means of getting rid of a most distressing ailment.—Believe me yours sincerely,

(Signed) WILLIAM BROWN,

TO PROFESSOR GUSCOTT.

SIR,—For many years I was a hopeless invalid, and for twelve months unable to attend to business. My breathing was hard, and at times I was propped up in bed. The medical man who attended me said that I was doomed to be a sufferer from asthma for the remainder of my days; but my daughter took upon herself to call upon you and explain the nature of my complaint, which you undertook to cure. With that apathy with which an invalid submits to almost anything, I suffered my daughter to have her way, and was placed under your care. What you did for me was simply marvellous. After a very short time I was very much better, and now am able to attend to business, can eat, drink, and sleep well, and enjoy as good health as any man at my age (54) can hope to do. I make this known as much to fulfil a duty as to benefit you. There are hundreds of persons in Christchurch who have known me only as an invalid, and who look at me now with astonishment, so complete is the cure which you have wrought by the most simple and least disagreeable method conceivable.—Yours gratefully,

(Signed) JOHN H. HALL,

To Professor Guscott.

Sir,—I have been suffering from paralysis, rheumatism, and dropsy between three and four years. Now, I have been under several doctors, besides visiting many others, but all to no avail. After you came to Christchurch my friends persuaded me to go to you, and I am very happy to say that after visiting you for a short time, I feel a wonderful improvement in my health, and I am fully confident that if I were in circumstances to continue your herbal treatment, you would ultimately cure me.

Believe me to be your ever grateful friend,
JOHN M'GUIRE,
Oxford-street, Lyttelton.

P.S.—You are welcome to make whatever use you choose of this.—J. M'G.

To Professor Guscott.

SIR,—I have been troubled with liver complaint, indigestion, wind on the stomach, etc., for a long period, and I have had medical advice and I have taken all sorts of patent medicines, but to no purpose, and being advised to come to you I did so. When I applied to you I was in a very weak state, but you told me you could cure me, so I placed myself under your treatment and I am happy to state that I am now enjoying good health and am quite strong, and I would recommend anyone suffering from the same complaint to place themselves under your herbal treatment and they can depend on a perfect cure.

I am, Sir, yours truly,
H. ARNOLD.

Woolston, May 14, 1879.

To Professor Guscott—

Sir,—I have been suffering from nervous debility for ten years, and have tried all the medical skill I could get in Christchurch and other physicians in the old country. I have never been able to sleep or eat, but since being under the treatment of Professor Guscott for such a short time I have received wonderful relief, and persons in Christchurch who have known me for years can certify that I am quite a new man; and it appears to me extraordinary how Mr Guscott can effect such wonders. I can safely recommend any person suffering in the same way as I have been to place themselves under his herbal treatment. I write this for Mr Guscott to do or publish this as he pleases.

To Professor Guscott.

Sir,—I have been for some length of time (nearly three years) suffering from asthma, never been able to sleep, no appetite to eat, and continually coughing, and was that weak I could not get about to my business properly, but since under your treatment I have had considerable relief. I can now sleep well, and eat well, and the improvement I find in myself is most extraordinary, and would certainly recommend any one suffering from the same complaint to try your remedy. I feel it my duty to let the public know what benefit I have received during the short time I have been under your care. I write this for Mr Guscott to make what use he thinks proper with, and wish it published.

Yours truly,
PETER M'KENNA.

To Professor Guscott.

Sir,—I have been troubled with Liver Complaint these last six years, many times been not able to attend to work. I have tried everything in the shape of patent medicines. I have been an outdoor patient in the Hospital; I got at times temporary relief. I could not sleep on my left side; I kept rolling about backwards and forwards in bed. When I got up in the morning, I would rather be in bed, but work I had to attend to. When I had eaten a light meal I found it always lodged in my stomach. Always costive, a great palpitation, pains across the chest, more particularly under the left breast, always a violent pain between the shoulders, felt just the same as if any one was pouring water down my back, feet always cold. Happened to get one of your bills when you came to St Asaph street, which explained to me the symptoms I was labouring under. When I applied to you, you told me all my symptoms and guaranteed me a perfect cure, which, I am happy to say, you have done through your herbal treatment. I should recommend those troubled with Liver Complaint to place themselves under your treatment.

I am, Sir,
Truly thankful,
WILLIAM MANSON.

To Professor Guscott.

Sir,—I have been troubled with Dysentery for the last three months, so much so that I was perfectly exhausted, the linings of my intestines peeled away in flakes. I tried every remedy that I could hear of, but to no purpose. Hearing that you were in Christchurch, and seeing the many wonderful cures, induced to place myself under your treatment, and I am happy to say in one week I am free from the diarrhœa, and gaining strength from your herbal treatment.

I am yours respectfully,
ELLEN BROWN.

I give you this testimonial for the benefit of others, as I know there are a great many others suffering from the same complaint in Christchurch.

Montreal street, Christchurch,

To Professor Guscott.

Sir,—I have been troubled with Dropsy for this last five years. I have been treated before I came to Christchurch, in Dunedin, but got very little relief. I am in Christchurch now two years. I have tried the best medical advice to no avail. I gave up all hope. They wanted to tap me; but as I always heard after a person was tapped there was no cure, I declined to allow the operation. Seeing the cure you have made of Mrs Lee, near Oamaru, I was, like a drowning man, happy to see a prospect of once more being restored, and seeing the cures you had made in Dunedin in the "Saturday Advertiser," that you had come here to settle permanently, I made up my mind I would consult you, and as you were able to explain to me all my symptoms, the cause of my trouble, it gave me more confidence to place myself under your treatment. I am the mother of six children. I am happy to say now that I am free from Dropsy, and have full use and command of myself to attend to my domestic duties, as I had eight years ago.

I am your ever thankful,
ELLEN KENNALL.

To Professor Guscott.

Sir,—I have been troubled with Neuralgia for a length of time, and have suffered the most excruciating pains; tried everything that I could hear of, I then saw your testimonials in the papers, and the "Star." I was advised to give you a trial, but I have this to say, that I am perfectly free from pain. I can eat and sleep well, and am not disturbed at nights or meal times as I have been for a length of time. I have told several the pain I suffered, and the wonderful relief I have had, I would advise anyone who is troubled with Neuralgia to apply to you, as they can depend on a perfect cure.

Your's ever grateful,

A FEMALE CRUSOE.

The San Francisco Call contains an interesting account of an Indian woman who was accidentally abandoned on San Nicolas Island, off the coast of Southern California, and spent 18 years alone there before she was rescued. The fact of her existence was discovered by a man who went from the mainland to hunt for otters and who found footprints sunk deeply in the ground. He was unable to follow up these indications till nearly three years, when one of a party who accompanied him came suddenly upon the object of their search. She was in a small circular enclosure made of brushwood, about five feet high and six feet in diameter, with a small opening on one side. She was clothed with a garment made of skins of the shag, a species of duck that can neither walk nor fly. This garment reached almost to her ankles when she stood erect. She was sitting cross-legged, skinning seal-blubber with a rude knife made of a piece of hoop-iron driven into a piece of wood. There was no covering on her head, except a thick matted mass of hair, of yellowish brown colour, probably owing to exposure to the sun and the weather; it was short, as if the ends had rotted off. There were some wild dogs on the island, a few of which kept near her, and seemed to regard her as a mistress. She had lived on a plant resembling cabbage, called by Californians palo-santo, and a root known by the name of coreomite, also blubber of the various kinds of seals, &c. She had a rude apparatus for catching shellfish, and of the various kinds of seals, &c. She had a rude apparatus for catching shellfish, and strong fishing lines made of seal sinews, which seemed to indicate that she fished in the ocean. The expression of her face was pleasing, her features were regular, her complexion much fairer and her form more symmetrical than that of the Indian woman on the adjoining mainland. Some suspect that she belonged to a tribe much further north. She could not understand anything said to her in any of the Indian dialects of South California, but she had a wonderful capacity for conversing by signs. She retained all her teeth, but they were worn low, supposed to be due to her chewing tough and hard articles of food. Her age appeared to be about 50 years. She bowed to all who came near her, greeting them with a smile. She freely accompanied her discoverers to their vessel, but her conduct at once convinced them that she retained the virtue of female modesty. She showed singular dexterity in making water-vessels from grass and asphaltum, a substance which is plentiful both on the island and the mainland. She seemed to recognise various appliances of civilization. She died about seven weeks after reaching the mainland, partly from the effects of a fall, partly from dysentery, brought on by eating fruits and vegetables. Padre Gonzalez, the superior of the mission of Santa Barbara, has sent her dress of shagskins, her basket and implements to Rome, to the Museum of the Propaganda.
