Putting her plump gloved hand on his shoulder she did look at it.

"Oh, dear!" she said, with her rose-bud lips, and sank back, half fainting, on the sofa.

"Oh, blazes!" cried Jones, and sank beside her, rumpling the fatal parliament in his hand, "there's lots of happiness and champagne be gone to ruin."

It was a hard case. Instead of being dismissed and at liberty to marry the widow,

Jacob Jones was simply, by the legislature of New Jersey, incorporated into a turnpike company, and which made it worse, authorised (with his brother directors,) to construct a turnpike from Burlington to Bristol. When you reflect that Burlington and Bristol are located just a mile apart, on op-

the sides of the Delaware river, you will receive the extreme hopelessness of Jones'

"It's all the fault of that turnpike man, who gave 'em the champagne supper, or was it a breakfast?" cried Jones in agony. "If they'd only chartered for me a turnpike from Pig's Run to Terrapin Hollow, I might have borne it, but the very idea of ding a turnpike from Burlington to stol bears an absurdity on the face of it."

"No!" thundered Jones, crushing his hat between his knees, "and what is worse, the legislature has adjourned, and gone home drunk, and won't be back to Trenton it was a hard case. The mistake had cocurled on the last day of the session when the legislators and transcribing clerks were laboring under the effects of a champagne supper, followed by a champagne breakfast. Smith's name had been put where Jones ought to have been, and "scinty accuracy," as the Latin poet has it.

Save the Dead Leaves
If every horticulturist would reflect for a moment on the nature of fallen leaves—which contain not only vegetable matter, but the earthy salts, lime, potash, &c., needed for the next season's growth—and that, too, exactly in the proportion required by the very tree and plant from which they fall—nay, more, if they would consider

It is precisely in this way, by the deposition of these very leaves, that nature enriches the soil, year after year, in our great forests, it would scarcely be possible for such a reflecting horticulturist to allow these leaves to be swept away by every wind that blows, and finally be lost altogether. A wise horticulturist will diligently collect, from week to week, the leaves fall under each tree, and by digging in under the soil about the roots where it will decay and enrich that soil, and they will decay and rot, and thus, provide in the cheapest manner the best possible food for that tree. In certain vineyards in France, the vines are kept in the highest condition, by simply burying at their roots every leaf and branch that is pruned off such vines, or that falls from them at the

Perhaps there is no place in the world that affords a better theme for story or song, than classic Greece. Situated in one of the most lovely portions of the earth, protected on the north by mountains, and open to the sea on the south and west; all contribute to render the climate the most

SANTA BARBARA, CALIFORNIA, Sept. 11, 1853.—We have now at Santa Barbara a great curiosity. It is an Indian woman who has lived for eighteen years alone upon the Island of San Nicholas, a small island about forty-five miles from this place, during which time she has not seen the face of a human being. This island was once peopled by a tribe of Indians, to whom the Northwest tribes were hostile. To preserve the remnant of this tribe from destruction, as well as with a view to Christianize them, the Padres induced them to come to the main land eighteen years ago. After they were all on board the vessel sent for them, this woman swam ashore to look for her child which had been left; and a storm springing up in the night, the vessel was compelled to put to sea, and on returning she could not be found. She was known to be alive by those who at times visited the island for the purpose of hunting otters, from the marks of fires and from foot-prints in the sand.

On being approached the other day she manifested much joy, which she betrayed by signs of the most significant character, and at once commenced packing up her few articles of furniture. Her clothing consisted of skins of birds sewed together with the fibres of some tree or plant. Her food has been shell-fish, seals, and a small bulbous root similar in appearance to an onion, but wholly tasteless. The needles with which she stitches her garments are made of the sharp bones of a fish. She had two books made of a bent nail and sharpened by the friction on a stone. Her lines were beautifully twisted from the sinews of some animal, probably a species of fox which abounds on the island.
