PROSPECTS OF PEACE SAID TO BE EXCELLENT

Roosevelt's Efforts Toward This End Place Him in Center of World's Stage.

PRINCIPALS TO BE FREE.

President and Kaiser Agree That Other Nations Should Keep Hands Off.

JAPAN MAY NOT BE READY.

Belief Is General That the Mikado Would Prefer to Clear the Russians Out of the East Before Negotiating.

St. Petersburg, June 8—President Roosevelt, arriving with the excellent prospects of success to end the bloody Russo-Japanese war, is now the central figure of the world's stage. One of the main obstacles, it seems, will be overcome once both Japan and Russia have agreed to accept his good offices for the arrangement of the preliminaries. The belligerents are expected to be able to arrange the peace terms direct.

The President is believed to share with Emperor William the view that the belligerents should be allowed to settle the actual terms without outside interference.

Evidence also exists that President Roosevelt has secured the support of several continental powers and that at the proper time they will appear at his back. Exactly what is transpiring at Washington is being carefully guarded, the diplomats here being still greatly at sea, not being able to do more than venture a shrewd guess and indulge in speculation.

The interest with which the moves on the Washington chess board are being followed is evidenced by the manner in which the ambassadors and ministers, who learned of Ambassador Meyer's audience with Emperor Nicholas yesterday, flocked to the American embassy to-day in search of information. But the situation seems to be so delicate that the ambassador is compelled to display the most complete reserve.

If Japan proves moderate in her demands peace seems at last to be close ahead. An armistice probably will be the first evidence the world will have that the two powers have agreed to shake hands.

There is a significant change in tone on the part of some of the Russian newspapers like the Novoe Vremya, which never heretofore have even admitted the possibility of the conclusion of hostilities until Russia had recovered her military prestige by a victory. To-day the papers discuss calmly the advisability of ending the war if Japan's terms are reasonable. The payment of a big indemnity they declare would be too humiliating.

The Novoe Vremya says bluntly that if Japan asks too much it will pay Russia to prolong the contest indefinitely; while the Russ argues that if representatives of the Russian people are called together Japan will see herself confronted by the whole nation and she will readily agree to reasonable terms.

"Even the revolutionists," the Russ adds, "are not traitors. They are fighting the present rotten bureaucracy and not the mother country. They would not tolerate a disgraceful peace."

Universal regret is expressed in official circles at the retirement of M. Delcasse, until recently French Minister for Foreign Affairs. He was regarded as a true friend of Russia, and a personal friend of Foreign Minister Count Lamsdorff, and was a sincere and unequivocal supporter of the Dual Alliance. The Novoe Vremya says:

"We know how to appreciate true friends. We have so few of them."

The Russ and the Slovo consider M. Delcasse to be the victim of an attempt to play the impossible role of a connecting link between two rivals, Russia and Great Britain. The Slovo says:

"M. Delcasse's policy was ever directed toward the isolation of Germany, but he forgot that an alliance with Great Britain would ruin any political system aimed against Germany. The British alliance has not helped France in Morocco, but it has embroiled her with Germany. M. Delcasse pays the penalty by retiring, as complications can be easier avoided with him out of the cabinet, and his retirement will not affect the Dual Alliance."

Ascension Day, one of the most important of the Russian religious holidays, was not marked by the appearance of the expected imperial manifesto on the subject of the projected assembly.

Moscow, June 8—The All-Russian Zemstvo Congress to-day elected a deputation of ten delegates, headed by Count Hayden and M. Shipoff, to present an address to the Emperor asking for the immediate convocation of a representative assembly to decide the question of peace or war.

Attention in Washington Centered on Peace Negotiations.

Washington, June 8—Acting Secretary of State Loomis called on the President immediately after the visit of Ambassador Jusserand. While he would admit nothing as to the nature of his visit, there is excellent reason for the statement that he presented to the President the deciphered cable dispatches from Ambassador Meyer, at St. Petersburg, and Ambassador Reid, at London.

The dispatch from Ambassador Meyer was received over night, but was not translated until to-day. The nature of its contents at this time is not known. Mr. Loomis, as he left the White House, said that he was not in a position to discuss the peace situation at all. He expressed the belief that nothing would be made public here in an official way regarding the negotiations. He admitted that the situation was delicate and indicated that as a reason for not making public any details concerning the negotiations in progress.

M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, had a conference with the President soon after the latter's arrival at the executive offices to-day. The Ambassador was with the President for about half an hour. At the close of the interview, Ambassador Jusserand said he could not discuss the object of his call. Pressed for a statement as to whether peace negotiations were in progress, he replied that he could say nothing; that he had no news. He said that, if anything at all were to be made public, it would have to come necessarily from President Roosevelt. So far as his conference with the President was concerned, he was at liberty to say nothing.

The Russian Government was informed through Count Cassini (the Russian ambassador at Washington), through Count Alvensleben (the German ambassador at St. Petersburg), through Mr. Meyer (the American ambassador at St. Petersburg) and through Count von Osten-Sacken (the Russian ambassador at Berlin) of what the United States and Germany were seeking so that Ambassador Meyer's audience with Emperor Nicholas was prepared for in the fullest manner.

The understanding here is that Emperor Nicholas went so far as to say to Ambassador Meyer that he would like to know what Japan's terms would be. This inquiry was not to be construed as asking for peace, but only as telling friends that before taking so grave a step on their advice the Russian government might properly and naturally desire to know through those friends how Japan regarded peace.

Japan, it is believed in government quarters here, will be reluctant to lay down specific peace conditions—far more reluctant than at any stage of the war—because preparation has been made to carry the campaign to Russian territory, take Vladivostok and Harbin and then exclude Russia from the Pacific. Unless her high conditions are complied with this is a crude expression of what is thought to be Japan's immediate policy.

President and Kaiser Fully Agreed on Methods for Bringing Peace Negotiations About.

Berlin, June 8—The interviews Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German ambassador at Washington, has had with President Roosevelt and the cable correspondence between the ambassador and the foreign office here resulted in the President and the Emperor finding that they had identical views on the subject of peace and were nearly of the same opinion as to the method of drawing Russia and Japan into negotiations.

The joint view appeared to be that others, including France and Great Britain, ought to be left out, because to be sure of a community of views among all would be a slow and cumbersome business and would impress Russia as taking on the character of outside pressure. This is precisely what President Roosevelt and Emperor William wish to avoid. They wanted the Emperor of Russia to take the initiative and sought only that he should avail himself of the American and German governments as instruments for making the first step toward peace easier.

Russia Took Steps Three Days Ago to Ascertain Japan's Terms.

Paris, June 8—It is definitely known that the Russian Foreign Minister, Count Lamsdorff, seconded by M. Witte, president of the committee of ministers, has initiated overtures through the Russian representatives abroad to learn Japan's disposition and terms of peace. These overtures, it is said, were begun three days ago, and were the basis of the decidedly more hopeful view which the officials began to have. At the same time it was then and still is recognized that Count Lamsdorff and M. Witte represent the peace element, and it is not yet clear how far the movement is shared by the Emperor.

However, Count Lamsdorff's proposition gives the overtures the force of coming from responsible quarters, whereas the previous movements lacked official origin. This clears the way for conversations between officials and diplomats here and at other capitals which are now actively going on. These necessarily are circuitous, owing to Russia's inability to approach Japan directly. M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador here, has already conferred with the French authorities, who are fully aware of the desires of Count Lamsdorff and M. Witte. The change of the Foreign Office portfolio from M. Delcasse to Premier Rouvier caused a slight delay, but there is every indication that M. Rouvier will lend strong aid toward bringing the parties together.

This is likely to occur both through the Japanese authorities here and indirectly with London as an intermediary of Japan. British and American influences are chiefly relied on to move Japan, now that Count Lamsdorff and M. Witte have made the preliminary approaches. The sentiment here is strongly against over-optimism, as it is said that serious obstacles remain. One of the chief is the Emperor's failure personally to approve Count Lamsdorff's initiative, which leaves doubt whether the movement has the silent acquiescence of the Emperor.

Diplomats here hold the view that Tokio would prefer to continue the war until Vladivostok is taken and all the territory up to Lake Baikal is under Japanese control. The diplomats also believe that Tokio will hesitate to lay down terms until it is clear that Emperor Nicholas is willing to treat for peace.

CAPTURED CARGO SOLD.

Nagasaki, June 8—It is reported here that the Japanese are offering the cargo of the British steamer Oldhamia, recaptured by them from the Russians, for sale.

The Oldhamia was captured by a Russian cruiser May 19, while bound for Yokohama with a cargo of kerosene. She was retaken May 27 by a Japanese warship in the Battle of the Sea of Japan, and was subsequently taken to Sasebo, where she arrived May 30. The captain, engineer and two of the crew of the steamer were on board of her when she was recaptured. Twenty-nine of the crew of the Oldhamia were landed at Swatow, China, June 5, from a British steamer, to which they had been transferred by the Russians.

SKIRMISHES STILL FREQUENT.

Tokio, June 8, 1 P.M.—Imperial army headquarters made the following announcement to-day:

"At 11:30 on the morning of June 7 a body of Russians, some 100 strong, advanced from the direction of Sanchiatzu, about a quarter of a mile west of Yinripienmen, but were met and repulsed by us on an eminence lying north of that place. The enemy fled in confusion toward Nienpiling, seven miles southeast of Yinripienmen. One soldier and two saddle horses were captured. With the exception of skirmishes between scouts on both sides there is no change to report elsewhere."

WILL DISABLE RUSSIAN CRUISERS

Manila, June 8—In the matter of the disarmament and internment of the Russian warships here, Rear Admiral Train probably will take the breech blocks from the guns and dismount their engines. The Russian officers will be paroled within the limits of the islands, while the crews of the vessels, on the give word of Rear Admiral Enquist, will be paroled within the city limits.

RUSSIAN MUTINY SUPPRESSED.

Colombo, Ceylon, June 8—The French steamer [illegible], with Russian soldiers from Manchuria on board, reports that the Russians attempted to mutiny in the Straits of Malacca, but were suppressed.

KILLED BY SODA TANK EXPLOSION.

Kingston, N. Y., June 8—Hugh Dempsey was instantly killed to-day by the explosion of a soda water tank which he was charging with gas.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL, R. A., FIGHTS NEW RATE TABLE.

At Last Night's Meeting Formal Action Was Taken Demanding Quick Revision.

VOICES GENERAL SENTIMENT.

Fort Greene and Gilbert Expected to Take the Same Course—More Letters Received.

As fast as the councils of the fraternal order of the Royal Arcanum meet nowadays the question of the new rates of assessment comes up and the matter is warmly discussed. The feeling is everywhere prevalent with Arcanumites that the Supreme Council should be asked to reconvene immediately and enact different legislation from that which emanated from it at the recent meeting in Atlantic City. The feeling against the action of the Supreme Council runs high.

Franklin Council met last night in its room in Arcanum Hall, Fulton street and Bedford avenue. This council has about 300 members, many of them representative men. The attendance was the largest in the history of the council and the discussion waxed vigorous. The matter of the increased rates came up through the statement of a member of the council, who acted as a representative of the Supreme Council, the regular Supreme Council representative not being able to attend.

Franklin Council members went over the matter in all its phases, and it was unanimously resolved that the Supreme Council be informed that it was the sense of Franklin Council that the new rates of assessment adopted were unwise and unjust, and that the Supreme Council should be reconvened at once to consider the whole matter and arrive at some more reasonable adjustment of rates.

A committee to represent the council in all meetings in which the matter of rates should come up for consideration was appointed. It consists of these three representative men: W. K. Davenport, Frederick Maywald and Joseph G. Willigman.

Fort Greene Council meets to-night. The council has a membership of more than 100, and among them are lawyers, physicians, men in official position in the city government and men prominent in all walks of life. It is probable that this council will take similar action to that of Franklin Council, as this is the predominant feeling in Royal Arcanum circles as the proper way to treat the matter.

Gilbert Council No. 1343, which has a membership of 900, in its ranks being a large force of representative men, at its last meeting set aside the night of June 30 as the time for a special meeting to consider the new rates and what is best to be done under the circumstances. It is the opinion of some of its members, at least, that action like that of Franklin Council will be taken. June 30 was to have been the night for an entertainment of Gilbert Council, it being the fifth Friday of the month, but it was resolved, instead, to take up the matter of the increased rates as of much more importance.

No Evidence of Official Dishonesty.

Among the many communications received by the Eagle from members of the local councils of Royal Arcanum there have been several letters containing indefinite and unsupported charges of incompetence and dishonesty on the part of the officers and members of the supreme council. These charges, when made with sufficient definiteness to give opportunity have been investigated as thoroughly as circumstances would permit, with negative results. Not a single fact has been unearthed which would tend to substantiate the charges.

The situation in the Royal Arcanum at the present time was succinctly put by Harry Jones, who is perhaps the most prominent and influential Arcanumite among the 20,000 members of the order in Brooklyn. Mr. Jones, besides being a past regent, is a member of the supreme council. He took a very active part in the recent convention at Atlantic City, which adopted the new rate schedule which has brought such a storm of indignation and protest from the older members of the order. Mr. Jones said:

"We are now in the same position as a business firm which has had supplies from another company for a number of years. Bills for the supplies have come in monthly and have been settled and receipted. The firm supplying the goods, by an oversight, has omitted to charge for some of the supplies.

"All the time we were getting the goods we have known that the other fellows were neglecting to charge as much as was their due, but we have said nothing about it because we thought it was the other fellow's business to look out for himself.

"After twenty-seven years of this the other fellow wakes up and discovers that there is a big deficit in his accounts. He looks over his books and finds the items which he has neglected to charge. He comes to us with his list and says:

"'Here, you have been getting your goods too cheap. We have been at fault for letting you get away, but you owe us for all these things. We still have a legal right to collect for these things and we need the money. What are you going to do about it?'

"In the meantime some of the members of our firm have died and their estates have been settled. Their estates have been settled and their heirs have got the benefit of all these errors on the part of the supply company. Several new men have come in.

"When the true condition of affairs is known the new men say, 'You fellows who have been in the firm longest are the ones who owe this money. You are the ones who have got the benefit of these mistakes and it is your place to make up this deficit.' We take the matter to court and the judge decides that the old members are responsible.

"No Appeal From Supreme Council."

"That is just the situation in the Royal Arcanum to-day. The Supreme Council is the judge and there is no appeal from its decision. Personally, I think that the fraternal bonds which unite us should be strong enough to make us all wish to help discharge the obligation, but as a strictly business matter it is just and right that those who have received the benefit of the early mistakes should make up the deficit."

"Would the order be in better condition than it is to-day if the older members could be forced out?" Mr. Jones was asked.

"The answer to that question is self-evident," replied Mr. Jones. "But I need not put it in words. It is clear that the obligations of the order are due to the deaths of members. It is equally clear that a large percentage of deaths occur among the older members. It is evident that the calculable obligations of the order in the next few years are for the deaths which will occur among these members. If there were no aged members in the order the existing obligations would be light and the death rate would return to something like the earlier figures which caused all this trouble."

"Do you think the new rate scale will drive some of the old members out?" he was asked.

"No, I do not. Men at the age where the burden is heaviest cannot get insurance in other companies. If they are unable to meet the premiums the money will be furnished in most cases by friends and relatives.

HEINZE APPLICATION DENIED.

Court's Ruling May Mean Financial Ruin of Copper King.

Helena, Mon., June 8—In an oral announcement from the bench, the Supreme Court has denied the application for a writ of supervisory control as sought by F. Augustus Heinze. His attorneys stated in the argument that if the writ was not granted Judge Burgess, of Butte, would strike out Heinze's answers in a suit involving $1,300,000, render judgment against him for the full amount and prevent the seizure of his property, thus effectually putting him out of business.

PRIEST A VICTIM OF GAS.

The Rev. Isadore Meister Saved by Prompt Work of Housekeeper at Fifth Avenue Hotel.

The Rev. Isadore Meister, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of the Most Holy Trinity, Mamaroneck, N. Y., was taken to the New York Hospital this morning from the Fifth Avenue Hotel, Manhattan, suffering from the effects of illuminating gas. He will recover, but probably owes his life to the promptness and quick wit of Miss Dunbrack, the hotel's housekeeper.

Father Meister came to New York last night to attend the banquet given Mgr. Burtsell at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. After the banquet he retired to his room on the third floor. This morning a chambermaid detected the odor of gas and traced it to the priest's room. She summoned the housekeeper, who found Father Meister unconscious on the bed. Sending the chambermaid to notify the office, Miss Dunbrack endeavored by means of artificial respiration to keep the clergyman alive.

The hotel physician came in response to a call and the New York Hospital was telephoned for an ambulance. At the hospital, Father Meister was restored to consciousness and will recover.

It is said that the gas and electric burners in the room occupied by Father Meister are on the same chandelier and it is likely that in turning on or off the electric light the clergyman turned on the gas. A jet was wide open when the accident was discovered.

TO SAVE MRS. ROGERS.

Counsel for Vermont Murderer Will Argue Application for Writ of Error Before Judge Peckham.

Albany, June 8—Judge Rufus W. Peckham of the United States Supreme Court will give a hearing here to-morrow to the attorneys for Mrs. Mary Rogers, the Vermont woman under sentence of death for the murder of her husband. Application was made to Judge Peckham by mail for a writ of error, which would, if granted, carry the case to the United States Court on appeal from the Vermont courts.

Mrs. Rogers' counsel were notified to-day that Judge Peckham would hear them to-morrow.

500,000 VOLTS DID NOT KILL.

Lynn, Mass., Electrician Defies Electric Current With Impunity.

Lynn, Mass., June 8—To demonstrate how little danger there is in electrical force when properly handled, Professor Elihu Thomson of this city yesterday permitted over half a million volts to pass through his body without displaying the slightest tremor or experiencing the least physical discomfort from the test. The demonstration was made for the benefit of the members of the Commercial Club of Boston.

Professor Thomson adjusted a special apparatus to his body and a high frequency current was used. Suddenly there was a flash from the finger tips and great sparks flew into the air, illuminating two incandescent lights that were held two feet from the fingers.

MURDERER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Edward Pekarz Tried to Cut His Jugular Vein With the Jagged Point of a Broken Spoon.

Edward Pekarz, a self-confessed murderer locked up in the Tombs, Manhattan, awaiting trial, attempted suicide during the night by hacking at his throat with the jagged end of a spoon, which he had concealed in his cell. He was found in time to save his life, and will recover.

Pekarz murdered Mrs. Sarah Rosenberg, of 222 East Houston and First street, Manhattan, with whom he lived. The murder was a particularly atrocious one, he beating out her brains with a hammer and afterward cutting her throat. He was found a week later in Brooklyn. When arraigned before Judge Cowing for pleading, Pekarz confessed the murder and pleaded for death in preference to life imprisonment.

Yesterday counsel visited Pekarz and told him that his trial would probably not come before fall, and this seemed to have a depressing effect on him. In consequence a special watch was placed on him last night. During the night the special watchman noticed that Pekarz was making some peculiar motions while lying in bed. Pekarz was covered with a sheet, but the watchman looked intently and saw some blood on the pillow. He opened the cell door and seized Pekarz and found that he was attempting to cut his jugular vein.

Pekarz had broken the spoon which he had concealed, leaving a jagged end. With this he had hacked at his throat, making a gash, but not succeeding in cutting the vein. He was taken to the prison hospital and Dr. [illegible] was summoned who attended him, without the necessity of his being taken to a regular hospital. Pekarz will recover.

GREENE COUNTY SHERIFF FOUND.

Catskill, N. Y., June 8—Charles A. Post, Sheriff of Greene County, who disappeared from his home a week ago, is alive and well at Niagara Falls, according to a letter received by his family to-day. The letter said that Mr. Post intended to return home within a few days.

NOTED ARMY NURSE DEAD.

Cambridge, Mass., June 8—Mrs. Jane H. Worrall, senior vice president of the Army Nurses' Association, is dead at her home in this city after a long illness. Mrs. Worrall was 78 years of age. During the Civil War she served as a nurse at Washington, at Fort Monroe and at Baltimore.

YACHT MATE DROWNED.

MAN TO HEAD EQUITABLE PICKED, BUT NOT NAMED.

Committee Preserves Deep Secrecy as to Its Report to Be Made To-morrow.

JUDGE GRAY HAS HAD NO OFFER.

Fierce Denials of "$10,000,000 Scandal" Story—Hendricks Still Investigating.

The man to head the Equitable Life Assurance Society, as chairman of the board, was selected to-day at a meeting of the nominating committee selected yesterday by the board of directors. The greatest secrecy is being used to keep the name from the public before it can be acted upon at to-morrow's meeting of the directors. It was stated that the committee might decide not to report the nomination, but to leave the matter to the full board.

At one time this afternoon it was believed that Judge George Gray, of Delaware, was the man selected, but no one would say anything to confirm this report. A dispatch to the Eagle from Wilmington, Del., states that Judge Gray denies the report that he was offered the position.

"I have not seen or held any communication with any director of the Equitable Life," said Judge Gray. "The report is without foundation."

The full nominating committee did not meet this morning. August Belmont, Chauncey M. Depew and David H. Moffat were the only members present. They met in President Alexander's office and conferred together for two hours. The nominating committee was named yesterday after the old committee had declined to serve.

August Belmont told a reporter for the Eagle that he could not say anything concerning the action of the committee this morning. He said it would be indelicate to talk at this time. It was ascertained that the work of the committee was complete, and that it would make its report to the directors to-morrow.

Though the committee selected one man, it was intimated that two or three other names would be suggested in the report, so that the directors would have no lack of material out of which to make a chairman of the board.

State Superintendent of Insurance Francis H. Hendricks has discovered new evidence of irregularities in the Equitable, and as a result, he put President Alexander through the third degree to-day. The discoveries made by the superintendent in his examination of directors and employes had given him fresh material for new examinations of Alexander and Hyde.

Superintendent Hendricks varied his methods to-day by confronting Alexander with H. Rogers Winthrop, the Equitable's financial manager. Hyde's friend Winthrop and President Alexander were together before Mr. Hendricks nearly all the morning.

Indignant denials were given to-day to a story published in the New York World of this morning. The World stated that Superintendent Hendricks had discovered a great scandal, in which the amount involved was $10,000,000. It stated further that this scandal involved the Equitable Trust Company, of which Alvin W. Krech is president, and that Superintendent Hendricks, whose authority does not extend to banking institutions, had called in Superintendent Kilburn, of the State Banking Department.

The World stated, also, that it had sent a representative to Mr. Krech's home last night and that Mr. Krech was told of the bare facts in the World's possession and assured that anything he might say in explanation would be printed. Mr. Krech's reply, as published, was:

"I have nothing to say."

To-day brought a complete collapse to this story. In a dispatch from Albany Superintendent Kilburn was quoted as denying any knowledge of the alleged investigation by his department. Superintendent Hendricks laughed derisively at the story.

"What is the use of denying that story?" asked Mr. Hendricks in disgust. "If I deny it to-day, I will have to deny another like it to-morrow."

President Krech, of the Equitable Trust, which is one of the Equitable Life's subsidiary companies, made a detailed and emphatic denial of the whole story and said it was false from beginning to end. Mr. Krech placed particular emphasis on his denial that Superintendent Hendricks had examined him concerning any thing connecting the Equitable Life Assurance Society and the Equitable Trust Company in a way that might be construed as a scandal. He issued the following typewritten statement:

"I know absolutely nothing of a $10,000,000 scandal or any other scandal with which the Equitable Trust Company of New York has the slightest connection. I was not seen at my house or any other place last night by any reporter as stated in the morning paper. The story is made out of the whole cloth and is a baseless misstatement."

To this Mr. Krech added a verbal statement, saying:

"The New York World had absolutely no communication with me through its reporters by telephone or any other way last night at my home or any other place. It is not true that I was questioned by Superintendent Hendricks concerning any scandal connected with the Equitable Trust Company. I was questioned about the Equitable Life Assurance Society's deposits in the Equitable Trust Company. I know there is no basis for any scandal, not even a tiny scandal, involving me, or the Equitable Trust Company."

When asked if it were possible that the story was based on possible profits made by the Equitable Life officers in the organization of the Equitable Trust Company and the sale of a controlling interest in its stock to the Equitable, Mr. Krech said he knew nothing of that, as the trust company was organized twenty years before he became its president. Up to 1902 the company was known as the American Traders and Loan Company. In 1902 Mr. Krech became its president.

President Alexander, of the Equitable Life, characterized the World story as entirely false. He said he had heard of no irregularities in the Equitable Trust Company.

D. O. Mills, an Equitable director, who resigned this week, said he did not believe there was anything scandalous in the connection of the Equitable Trust Company with the Equitable Life's affairs. He said the worst feature was extravagance and the enormous salaries.

H. C. Deming, president of the Mercantile Trust Company, another of the Equitable Life Assurance Society's companies, said the story of the $10,000,000 scandal was a lie from first to last. The Mercantile Trust Company and the Equitable Trust Company are to be merged into one company eventually.

GRANITE LINEN MILLS BURNED.

Loss on Big Plant at Wortendyke, N. J., $150,000.

Wortendyke, N. J., June 8—The extensive mills of the Granite Linen Company were totally destroyed by fire to-day, involving a loss it is estimated at $150,000. The plant covered about an acre of ground and was three stories in height. There was no fire department near at hand and when fire companies from adjacent towns arrived the fire was beyond control.

MAY SMOKE CIGARETTES.

But It Is Unlawful to Sell Them or Give Them Away in Indiana.

Indianapolis, June 8—Judge James Leathers, of the Marion County Superior Court, to-day decided in the case of the state against W. W. Lowery, indicted for smoking a cigarette, that the anti-cigarette law passed by the last Legislature is constitutional, except wherein it may conflict with the interstate commerce law. Smokers may import cigarettes from other states and smoke them, but it is held unlawful to sell or give them away. Mr. Lowery is discharged. The state will take an appeal in order to test the law.

CHICAGO HAS HER DAILY RIOT.

One Man in a Hospital and Four in Jail Make Up the Score.

Chicago, June 8—Beginning with a "peace argument," a labor discussion at North avenue and Halsey street to-day grew into a riot, which blocked two lines of street cars, held up traffic in several streets, brought two police patrol wagons and ended when one man was taken to the County Hospital and four men were in cells. Incidentally several heads were bruised.

MONEY FOR OBSERVATORY.

Institute Trustees to Consider Acceptance of the Gift of a Well Known Brooklynite, Not Named.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences to-morrow an offer of a gift from a well known Brooklynite, whose identity has been kept secret, of $25,000 to the institute for the purpose of constructing an astronomical observatory at the Institute Museum on Eastern Parkway, will be considered. The officers of the Institute maintain the strictest reticence regarding the gift until they have had an opportunity to consider it and decide whether or not to accept it.

Professor Franklin W. Hooper, director of the Institute, when seen by an Eagle reporter this morning, while admitting that the trustees would consider some such gift at their meeting to-morrow, declined to make known any of the conditions of the gift or the name of the giver. He said the trustees wish to discuss the matter among themselves before anything is made public regarding the gift.

It is understood, however, that one of the conditions under which the person offering to build the proposed astronomical observatory makes the tender to the institute is that the observatory shall be open to the general public on occasions that would call the observatory into use.

AUTO BUTTED INTO A TREE.

Chauffeur Was Thrown Out, but the Children in the Machine Were Uninjured.

One of the hundred large automobiles that took to Coney Island yesterday afternoon the orphan children of Manhattan and Brooklyn for a day at the seashore met with a mishap on the return run through Prospect Park last evening. The huge machine, which is the property of the Berg Automobile Company, at Broadway and Fiftieth street, Manhattan, was in charge of Alexander Downes, a negro chauffeur, 25 years old, of 1423 Broadway, Manhattan, and contained about a dozen children.

Downes was proceeding along the south lake driveway of the park at a good rate of speed in order to escape the impending shower, and for some unexplained reason the machine swung wide and crashed into one of the trees lining the roadway. The entire front of the car was smashed and its driver thrown violently from his seat to the ground, receiving internal injuries. None of the children was hurt, however, although the shock sent them from their seats to the floor of the car.

Patrolman Haag, of the Forty-sixth precinct, happened to be near. Ambulance Surgeon Stanley, of the Seney Hospital removed the chauffeur to that institution. The children were taken home in other autos.

"MILLER'S" BOND FORFEITED.

Magistrate Dooley Believed Alleged Pickpocket Was Trying to Elude Assemblyman Smith.

Magistrate Dooley, sitting in the Adams street court this morning announced that the $500 bond of H. Weinstock, alias Joseph Miller, for his appearance to answer a charge of grand larceny, had been forfeited through his non-appearance. Lawyer Colvin had presented to the court a certificate from Dr. L. Cohen of 52 Eldridge street, Manhattan, stating that the prisoner was confined to his bed from acute bronchitis. But there had been similar certificates from other doctors and the magistrate was inclined to the belief that there was something wrong and that Joseph Miller, who lives at 215 East Fourth street, was trying out the patience of the court.

"Miller," who is known to the police, was arrested by Detective McSherry, of the Pinkerton agency, on the Gravesend race track on the charge that he slipped his hand into the pocket of Assemblyman and Lawyer Richard H. Smith of 271 Broadway, Manhattan. McSherry says he saw "Miller's" hand in the assemblyman's pocket on the 25th ult. and saw him draw out a roll of bills. The roll was dropped when the detective caught the man, and it was picked up and identified by Smith. It contained $18. Smith was annoyed at the delay, and it was due to his persistence that the hearing was set down peremptorily for this morning. Mr. Smith traveled from Smithtown, L. I., to get to court, and he insisted on going on with the hearing. The bail bond was furnished by Isaac C. [illegible], of [illegible] street, Manhattan.

SHE STRUCK AT THE LAWYER.

Mrs. Seitz Didn't Like Comment of Husband's Counsel and Made Scene in Court.

William Seitz, a baker, living at 100 Jamaica avenue, who was arrested some weeks ago charged with failing to provide for his wife Wilhelmina and six children, and who in court declared that a boarder named Enright was causing all his troubles, to whom Magistrate Furlong issued an edict that he should leave the house on a certain date, but who did nothing of the kind, but, instead, was arrested, along with Seitz, each charged with trying to shoot the other, was in the Gates avenue court again to-day.

Counsel for Seitz said he had been exonerated of the assault charge and Enright had departed. Bliss seemed to be at hand, when Lawyer Bode made a remark in the court which Mrs. Seitz did not like, and she aimed a blow at him. It fell short, but Magistrate Furlong, who saw the attempt, ordered the woman locked up. Later, he let her go, after administering some advice about conduct in court. Mr. Seitz was allowed to depart also, his counsel having agreed that he pay Mrs. Seitz $5 per week, a bond for the performance of the same being waived.

"All right up to the present."

Diving parties immediately proceeded to the scene. Those who were saved were standing in the vicinity of the conning tower at the time of the disaster and were picked up by a passing trawler. They were Lieutenant Candy, commander of the boat; Sub-Lieutenant Murdoch, a petty officer and a seaman.

The lost boat was of about 200 tons displacement and was launched in 1904.

One of the survivors who was interviewed said he was unable to explain the cause of the accident to the "A 8." He added that she suddenly dipped while her hatches were open and that the boat immediately filled and sank. The man added:

"Lieutenant Candy came to my assistance when I was almost exhausted and kept me afloat until we were picked up by the trawler."

This is the third submarine boat disaster within a little more than a year.

The sinking of the British submarine boat "A 8" off Plymouth this morning recalls the sinking of submarine boat "A 5" off Queenstown, February 16, as the result of explosions on board that vessel, and the sinking of the submarine boat "A"—1 off Portsmouth March 18, last year, as the result of being run down by a steamer while the submarine boat was submerged.

The first explosion on board the "A"—5 was described as being so violent that it was heard ten miles away and shook the submarine's convoy, the Hazard, from stem to stern. Dense volumes of smoke were immediately seen pouring from the only outlet of the boat. Rescuers hurried to the scene, but it was only by superhuman efforts that they were able to force their way through the stifling fumes after having been repeatedly driven back. When they finally reached the lower part of the boat the rescuers encountered a terrible spectacle. Of the wounded and dying crew only one man was able to speak, and he was begging to be saved. While the rescuers were forcing the manhole forward upon a second explosion occurred, blowing one of the men twenty feet upward. He fell in the water and was rescued. Six men lost their lives and twelve were seriously injured by this disaster. The "A"—5 was a new boat, which had only just left her builders, and after extensive and satisfactory trials had been ordered to Queenstown for the purpose of familiarizing military officers with the appearance of a submarine boat. Sixty army officers were present to witness the diving experiment which led to such tragic result. All the crew were volunteers.

The disaster to "A"—1 was even more appalling. She was submerged near the Nab lightship, off Portsmouth, when she was run down by a steamer of the Donald Currie Line, and all on board of her, eleven officers and men, were drowned. At the time the "A"—1 was struck she was engaged in maneuvers and was lying in seven fathoms of water awaiting the approach of a battleship. The loss of the submarine boat was not known for some hours after the liner had reported in the maneuvering fleet that she had struck a torpedo, and after a long search the ill-fated submarine boat was discovered. It was presumed that the steamer in striking the submarine boat upset her tripod, spilled the gasoline in the tanks and rendered her helpless. The crew were battened down and met their fate from suffocation amid the fumes of gasoline.

DIVORCE FOR MRS. HENDRICK.

Testimony in Undefended Suit Showed Husband's Guilty Relations With a Former Actress.

Whether he had knowledge that there was an order of arrest, signed by Supreme Court Justice Marean, out against him, or not, Dr. Charles C. Hendrick, whose association with Laura Biggar, the actress, has been the subject of many newspaper stories, did not appear this morning to defend a suit for an absolute divorce in Brooklyn, and his wife, Mrs. Agnes M. Hendrick, was granted a decree from the bench. The Hendrick divorce action has been on the equity calendar for this month for trial before Justice William M. Smith. Yesterday when it was called for trial, Dr. Hendrick was represented by counsel. This morning, his witnesses were in court, but he was not, and he had no attorney. Deputy Sheriff Hayes stood at the door with the warrant in his pocket in vain.

The infidelities of the Hendricks, according to the plaintiff, date back to the time when Laura Biggar entered the sanitarium of Dr. Hendrick, in New Jersey. At the time, Laura Biggar represented herself as the principal beneficiary of the estate of H. M. Bennett, from which she is said to have secured $100,000 by a settlement. Mrs. Hendrick claimed that her husband abandoned her and her son, Thomas C. Hendrick, after the court proceedings in New Jersey and went to live with the corespondent, in Chester, Vt.

On the trial this morning the witnesses were ex-Justice of the Peace Samuel Stanton, of New Jersey, and Miss May Ross, a nurse living with the family at Chester, Vt. Both testified as to certain occurrences in New Jersey and in Vermont that led Justice Smith to say, without hearing further testimony:

"I grant a decree on that testimony."

TO ENTERTAIN A PRINCE.

Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, called on Mayor McClellan to-day in his official capacity to discuss with the Mayor the proposed entertainment of Prince Louis of Battenberg, who is coming here with a British fleet in October. Prince Louis is a full admiral in the British navy and is a nephew of King Edward VII.

At the close of the meeting, the Mayor said his talk with Mr. Morton was informal and that no plans were agreed on. Governor Higgins is to be asked to co-operate that the city and state may combine in the official welcome to the royal visitor.

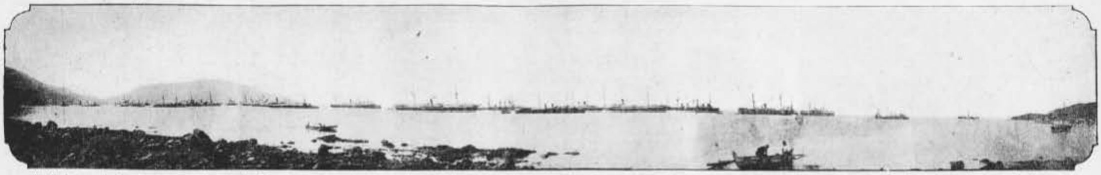
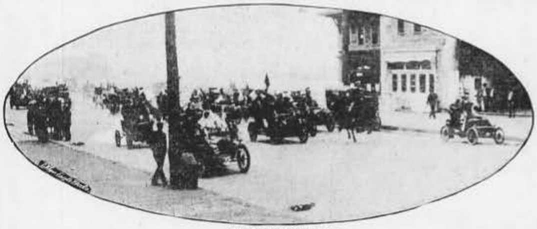
AS ROJESVENSKY'S FLEET APPEARED WHEN IT LEFT MADAGASCAR



The Eagle has received the first photograph from the Far East, showing the warships constituting Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet, wiped out in the Korean Straits by Admiral Togo, leaving Nossi Be, Madagascar, where a protracted stay was made, despite the charges of violations by France of the neutrality law. Nossi Be is an island and French colony off the northwest coast of Madagascar. It is of volcanic origin. The people are chiefly of Madagascar origin. In the sheltered bay of this place the Russian ships took on a lot of provisions, water, and, presumably, coal, for the last leg of the journey eastward to meet Togo, and which meeting proved so disastrous to the Czar's cause.

500 ORPHANS TAKEN TO CONEY ISLAND IN AUTOMOBILES.



Automobiles on Surf Avenue.

On the Dreamland Boardwalk.

Five hundred orphans, charges of the city, were taken to Coney Island yesterday in automobiles. They had an enjoyable time despite the rain. The New York Motor Club planned the outing for all the orphans who had behaved themselves for a month in the various asylums. Many prominent persons assigned their machines to carry the youngsters to the seashore. The gathering place was at Columbus Circle. Ninety-three machines were used to accommodate 500 children. Every youngster wore a ribbon on his or her arm corresponding to the colors worn by their guardians. Seven mounted policemen led the automobiles down Broadway to the Brooklyn Bridge. The speed was far above the legal limit. The traffic regulators of the city put into utter confusion the orderly pulsation of the main artery of New York's business life for the fun of the orphans. When they came to City Hall Park they were wheeled through the walk in front of the municipal steps, where the Mayor, smiling and bowing, greeted them. The mounted police saw the procession safely across the Brooklyn Bridge, where, with tired horses, they handed them over to the guardianship of the Brooklyn "Cossacks." There was a delightful trip to the Boulevard, and then a four-abreast race for Coney Island, with the big French automobile assigned to the Red Cross forging ahead every now and then to see if Dr. H. D. Belt and his assistance might be needed, and then dropping back into the gasoline vapor, seeking in vain for those who might have been dropped out.

At Dreamland the youngsters, ravenously hungry and hilariously happy, were marshaled in columns of two and marched to the pier dining room, where they devoured several tons of sandwiches and oranges, together with gallons of coffee, milk and lemonade. When they were comfortable they were taken to Bostock's, where they saw the performing animals. The trip homeward was made in a drenching rain storm, but the children did not mind the weather conditions. Among the 500 were youngsters from the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, the Mission of the Friend of Children, the New York House for Destitute and Crippled Children, the Leake and Watts Orphan Home, the Golden Hour House, the Howard Mission, the Children's Aid Society, the New York Children's Hospitals and Schools.

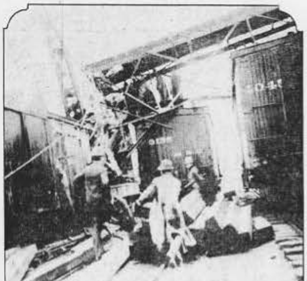
COLLAPSE OF A SIGNAL BRIDGE.



By the collapse of a signal bridge in the railroad yards at Jamaica, Tuesday, one man was killed and several others injured. While the men were putting new legs on the bridge, which extends over the tracks the structure suddenly toppled over and collapsed. No train was passing at the time, nor had any gone under the bridge immediately prior to its collapse. Some time ago the support on the north side was broken by a freight being smashed against it, but the damage done had been fully repaired, and no evidences of weakness had been manifest.

ENVOY DISCUSSES PEACE PLANS WITH ROOSEVELT

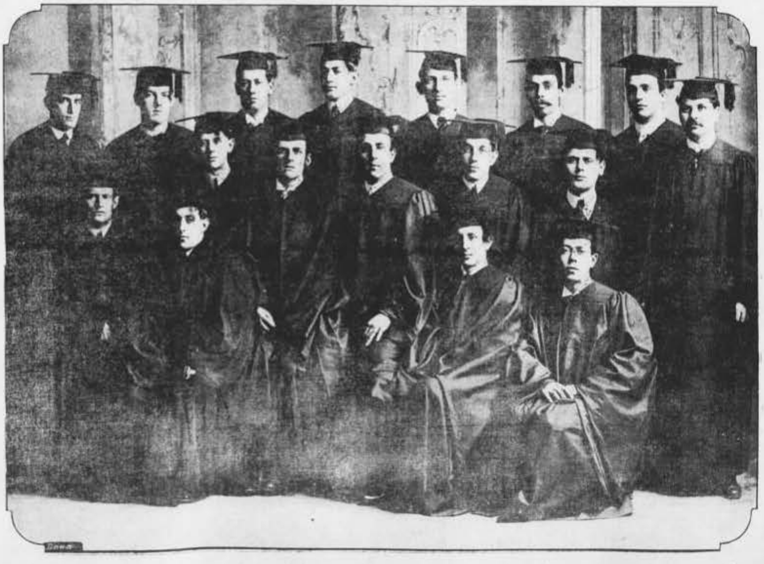
M. Jusserand, the French ambassador, had a conference with President oosevelt this morning. While he said he could not discuss the object of his it to the White House, it referred no doubt to the peace negotiations that now in progress to end the war in the Far East.

POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE GRADUATING CLASS.



EAGLE QUILLS.

By WILLIS BROOKS.

Beware of the man who always looks at his fellowmen through suspectacles.

George Eliot says: "To manage men one ought to have a sharp mind in a velvet sheath." But why should we everlastingly strive to manage men? Why not let men manage themselves? That would give all plenty to do and rid the world of most of its mischief.

They used to say that if you caught a rat, singed him and turned him loose, he would frighten all other rats from the premises. Possibly the same sort of treatment would rid our city streets of the speeding automobilists. At any rate, our magistrates ought to make it a little warmer for a few of them. Inflicting a fine of $15 on a millionaire is a good deal like inflicting American cheese on a rat that prefers fromage de brie.

Fuddle recently had a telephone put into his house. Then he went up and down the earth telling his friends what a great convenience it was and how little it cost.

"I only pay $3 a month," said he. "That entitles me to send fifty messages, to say nothing of the unlimited number I may receive."

He took pains to tell them all that whenever they had anything to say to him they could call him up from anywhere. For a week or so he seemed to think of nothing but his new plaything.

Then, one night, just after he had gone to bed early, dead tired from the day's hard work, he crawled out reluctantly to answer the telephone bell. One of his friends was at the other end of the wire.

"I say, old man," said the friend, "would you mind calling your neighbor Dunn to your 'phone for me? I've something important to tell him at once."

Of course, Fuddle didn't mind. You could have guessed that from the language he used after hanging up the receiver. It was the kind of language a man always uses when he doesn't mind—what becomes of his immortal soul. However, Fuddle kicked himself into his clothing and went over to Dunn's house. Then Dunn came back with him, used the telephone fifteen minutes, and stayed until after midnight telling stories which Fuddle had heard before.

That was Thursday night. The next day Fuddle had another hard ten hours at the railroad office, where he was employed. Then, Friday night, just as he was preparing to retire, dead weary again, a half dozen of his friends called him up over the 'phone to say that they wanted to play a little game of poker, and——

"We knew your family was away, Fuddle, so we thought maybe you'd invite us to play at your house."

There was nothing else for him to do. He had played at the other fellows' houses many times when their families were away, and it was now up to him to entertain them as cheerfully as he could.

At 1 o'clock, the usual quitting hour, Fuddle was $52 behind the game, and his friends all said it would be too bad to break up without giving him a chance to get even. So they played along until morning, when Fuddle was $80 behind. Everybody, including Fuddle himself, knew that he could not afford to lose that amount. It was therefore suggested that he telephone to the railroad office, saying he was sick, and that they play a little longer.

"Saturday, you know, isn't much of a day at the office anyway," somebody reminded him.

So Fuddle called up his employer on the phone which was in the room where the game was going on.

"Sick, are you?" said the superintendent. "What's the hmm—I mean what's the matter with you?"

"I've a terrible headache," Fuddle answered.

"Well, you stay home and nurse it to-day. Then Monday morning you can come down and get your pay. We shall not require your services any more. Goodby!" and Fuddle heard the click as the superintendent hung up his receiver. That was because the superintendent had heard the click of chips and the conversation of the chippers just behind Fuddle.

At 7 o'clock that evening, when the game broke up, Fuddle figured that he had lost $65 cash and owed $40 to other players.

"Awfully sorry, old man," they said to him, as they pushed their bleary faces out into the gathering night.

But they weren't so very sorry, after all; for when they were out of his hearing they held their sides and stamped the pavement with their heels, while they laughed convulsively over the cheap and convenient telephone Fuddle had talked so much about.

THE BROADER VIEW.

(President Roosevelt is trying to arrange peace between Russia and Japan—Washington News.)

Let the thoughtless ones clamor for peace,
  a peace that tyrants love;
A peace that tyrants would nurse, a Golgotha day by day,
  A crystallization of ais, with prisons that do not disgrace—
But my heart is aflame with a hope as pure
  as the heaven above,
That Freedom is ready to touch these millions of sentient clay,
  And that Russia's hundred tongues will cheer a new Marseillaise!

That the slaughter of conscripts has been a lesson bitter and long
To brothers, fathers and sons who still are tilling the field;
That the tyrant's ships, which have sunk,
  foretell the fate of the Czar;
That the sun of the blood red East may dry
  the roots of wrong.
That even Cossacks may strike to make
  Autocracy yield;
That a Danton may rise in his might to guide the Liberty car!

Do not prate unto me of peace till war has ended her task,
To wish such peace were a thought befitting children of slaves;
Do not slander the Deity's plan, whatever happens is starred;
Ere the world began it was fixed, though hid by Destiny's mask—
You may say that philosophy's hard, or dream the philosopher raves,
But list to Tennyson's lines, accept the faith of the bard.

"For the drift of the Maker is dark, an Isis hid by a veil,
Who knows the ways of the world, how God will bring them about?
Our planet is one, the suns are many, the world is wide.
Shall I weep if a Poland fall? shall I shriek if a Hungary fail?
Or an infant civilization be ruled with rod or with knout?
I have not made the world, and He that made it will guide!"

Microbe of Laziness.

It turns out that the "microbe of laziness" is no joke after all, but is a living actuality. In his report to the Legislature of the island, Dr. Bailey K. Ashford, U. S. A., states that probably 90 per cent. of the rural population of Porto Rico suffer from anemia. People thought the deficiency of blood and red corpuscles and the chronic prevalence of "that tired" feeling were the result of poor food, worry, destitution, etc., but Dr. Ashford has identified the condition as the same disease as tropical anemia, which is so troublesome in Mexico and elsewhere, and is caused by a parasitic worm in the intestines. The worm usually gains entrance by the penetration of the larvae through the skin.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL GARDEN PARTY.

Yesterday was the second day of the annual fair and garden party at St. Mary's Hospital, Buffalo and St. Mark's avenues, and it was a disappointing one. The continued rain and occasional cloudbursts in the afternoon so flooded and softened the grounds that the fair could not be held out of doors. The tents were very wet and the flags of all colors hung on the building and tents were drooping in sympathy. In the afternoon quite a number of the members of the Ladies Aid Association, under whose auspices the affair is being held, were present and carried up some of their wares to the basement of the building. But few attended in the evening and those who did spent their time in visiting the invalids in the wards. Excellent care and attentive nursing were evident everywhere. The children were a special object of interest. They took an active part in the fair and were ready with their little books to get visitors to take chances on their prizes. Despite their surroundings they were happy. It is needless to say that they were successful in filling their lists.

Two days remain, to-day and Friday, and it is expected that a number of people from the Catholic parochial societies in different parts of the borough will visit the grounds. Mrs. McLaughlin, honorary president of the Ladies Aid Association, is conducting the affair, and is ably assisted by Mrs. D. J. Creem, who has charge of the fancy table; Mrs. James Sheville, who directs the flower booth; Miss Kate McAvoy, at the toy table; Mrs. E. Keefe, at the candy table; Mrs. Griffen, at the ice cream table; Mrs. Alhohn, at the pharmacy booth; Mrs. [illegible], at the lemonade well, and Mrs. Sheville, at the refreshment table.

Gossip of the Stage

The internationally famous German Marine Band, consisting of nearly fifty master musicians and graduate soloists, directed by Herr Louis Kindermann, will play a return engagement at Teller's Broadway Theater next Sunday night, June 11. This musical organization was brought from Berlin as a special attraction at the St. Louis fair. The programme to be presented is varied and will embrace gems of comic and grand opera, and classic numbers.

Fortified with an affidavit, the press agent of the Bijou Theater makes claim that this story is the gospel truth:

A huge cluster of roses was handed over the footlights last night to Miss Edna May Spooner. As Miss Spooner graciously bowed her acknowledgment, a squeak proceeded from the cluster. Imagine her surprise when she discovered in the center a rat trap and four dainty white mice blissfully scampering about. Womanlike, she was tempted to scream and to drop the flowers, but the curtain was slowly rising for her second curtain call and she determined to make the best of it. As soon as the curtain fell, Miss Spooner exclaimed: "Well, I would like to know who perpetrated this joke. Suppose the mice were in the audience; that is why I clung to those flowers instead of dropping them, as I longed to."

Policeman John Fogarty was called into the conference that followed, and he endeavored to trace the sender of the flowers, but all he could find was the name of the florist, who said a strange man had ordered them. The head usher stated that when the flowers had been received at the theater a man approached him and examined the cluster with interest. Two years ago a strange man annoyed Miss Spooner by sending to her a pet baby monkey in a basket across the footlights.

After months of managerial mourning at the barrenness of the theatrical season, it develops that the playhouses in New York at least, have had rather a prosperous eight months. Out of something less than 200 productions, among which were scores intended only for brief engagements, fourteen plays of one kind or another enjoyed runs of more than 100 performances. Three of these reached the 200 mark. They were "The College Widow," "The Music Master" and "Fantana." The eleven other offerings to which reference has been made were "Adrea," "Higgledy-Piggledy," "Humpty Dumpty," "Leah Kleschna," "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," "The Duke of Killicrankie," "The School Girl," "The Sho Gun," "You Never Can Tell" and "It Happened in Nordland." "The Duke of Killicrankie" remained longer than any other English piece. Incidentally, it is interesting to note that the briefest engagements of the year were those of "The Rich Mrs. Repton" and Murray Carson in "The Trifler."

Odds and Ends.

A man in a London suburb has covered the walls of one of his rooms with pawn-tickets. It is a somewhat expensive hobby. Each ticket has been procured by the man himself in a legitimate manner, but the articles pledged are, of course, only of small value.

The relatives of a wealthy Austrian nobleman, Baron Reskovski, recently sought to have him declared insane on the ground that his usual wear at home is a leather suit patterned like that of a turtle. In the course of his defense, which was so convincing that he won his case and was declared to be perfectly sane, the baron brought forward a remarkable array of instances of wealthy men now living who are eccentric in their dress. Among them he included the Emperor William, who possesses over 200 uniforms; a Madrid millionaire, who dresses his servant girls as flowers—roses, violets, tulips and so forth—and his men servants as trees, and a Parisian who never wears hats—which seems a decline to the merely commonplace. The baron closed an exhaustive list with the case of Otto Hanau, a wealthy sugar manufacturer of Buda-Pesth, who selects his suits to match his wall papers.

WALKS AND TALKS.

By JULIUS CHAMBERS.

We hear a great deal just now about clever diplomatists who are keeping peace in Europe. Most statesmen on the continent have short memories and are not mindful of the fact that the people of the United States had their own troubles between 1861 and 1865.

Never was a statesman born who could have handled the complications that confronted the federal government at Washington during the Civil War better than did Secretary Seward.

At the gravest hour of that terrible contest England and France formed an alliance to destroy this republic in sections. England's plan was to assist the Southern Confederacy to gain its independence and then to allow France to take possession of it. France was to take Mexico and invade the triumphant but penniless confederacy across the Mexican frontier.

Meanwhile, England would take advantage of the first complication that occurred on the Canadian border and would invade the federal states from the northward. The scheme was well planned and the anxiety of Secretary Seward was so great as to give him many sleepless nights.

When the tension was at its highest the British and French ministers called together at the State Department. It was then located in an insignificant brick building in the northern part of Washington. These two men intended to make a joint protest against interference with foreign trade with the Southern ports. In other words, they intended to provoke a quarrel that was sure to arouse European sympathy for the federal cause and to insure the success of the enemies of the Union.

Mr. Seward was notified of the arrival of the two ministers and understood the gravity of the event. One of his under secretaries was directed to meet the men and to say:

"The Secretary of State of the United States of America does not recognize any joint interests between England and France and he declines to receive the ministers from these two countries at the same time, although he would be glad to accord to each of them an audience at any time."

After a brief mutual deliberation, the two men left the State Department. They announced an intention to communicate with their home governments, but it was before the days of ocean cables and by the time their complaints reached London and Paris a new phase had been put upon the life and death struggle between the North and South. The crisis was tided over and a catastrophe was averted.

This story never has been told, so far as I know. I have it from Melville E. Stone, who heard it from the lips of a member of President Lincoln's cabinet. William H. Seward and Charles Francis Adams (then American minister to the court of St. James) never received their fair share of credit for the triumph of the Northern arms. The awkward statue of Seward in Madison square is the only recognition that the metropolis has bestowed.

One of my first out of town assignments was to attend the funeral of William H. Seward, at Auburn, N. Y. It was a very raw October day, but I remember to have seen at the grave side, in Fort Hill Cemetery, Thurlow Weed, E. D. Morgan, Richard Schell, Horatio Seymour, Henry Ward Beecher, John Bigelow and William Cullen Bryant.

There are many circles and squares in Washington named after less memorable men than Seward. In Manhattan, a small but pretty parklet at Canal and Jefferson streets bears his name. It is the highest tribute that this real hero of the federal cause has received.

The return of Joseph H. Choate, lately Ambassador to the Court of St. James, is an event of more than usual importance, because this energetic American will plunge into the activities of the legal profession. It is admitted that he has been secured by one of the factions in the Equitable Life Assurance fight.

Mr. Choate is a man of tremendous energy. His unfailing good humor and boyish spirits enable him to work like a galley slave, although he is no longer young. Mr. Choate is a living proof of the assertion that "work [illegible] all people."

A story about Joseph H. Choate that Wayne MacVeagh, of Philadelphia, is fond of telling occurs to me.

At a public dinner, Mr. Choate had occasion to say that he attached no value to letters of introduction and never had accepted but one in all his life.

"Tell us about that letter," shouted a voice across the table. "Who gave it and to whom was it addressed?"

"It was from Rufus Choate to William M. Evarts," was the embarrassed answer, according to MacVeagh.

In other words, the greatest lawyer in New England sent this young Harvard man, who had been raised at Salem, to the office of the greatest lawyer in the American metropolis. That was a start in life such as few young men have. Young Joseph's career was assured. He eventually became a partner and ultimately the head of the firm. MacVeagh likes to tell this story.

Right Worshipful John E. Sparrow, who has just been appointed district deputy grand master of the Third Masonic District, was born in Brooklyn in 1865. He was made a Mason in Eureka Lodge, Wilmington, Del., in 1891, and served as junior and senior deacons of that lodge. He returned to Brooklyn in 1895 and affiliated with Long Island Lodge, of which he became master in 1899 and 1900. He is past high priest and was grand captain of the host of the Grand Chapter of Delaware. He is now a member of Orient Chapter, of Brooklyn. In 1902 he was made commander of Clinton Commandery and has been successful in all his undertakings.

SIMON W. COOPER.

Simon W. Cooper, of Babylon, L. I., who has just been named as one of the grand stewards of the Grand Lodge, F. and A. M., is a past master of Babylon Lodge, 793. He was made a Mason in March, 1887, and has served as secretary, junior warden and master, occupying the latter chair in 1892 and 1893. He served for twelve years as secretary of his lodge, both before and after his term as master. He is the first member of Babylon Lodge to be appointed to a Grand Lodge office.

Graduates Receive Diplomas and Give Play "Joan of Arc."

The commencement exercises of St. Thomas Aquinas Academy were held last evening at the Majestic Theater, and in addition to the graduating exercises proper, a large audience enthusiastically received the students rendering of the historical cantata, "Joan of Arc."

Eighteen pretty young women received their diplomas as graduates, and several prizes were presented, among them prizes for preliminary work in three of the boys, William Donaldson, Edward Ramsey and Arthur Shea. The exercises opened with a welcome song, well rendered by the academy students, and followed by the salutatory of Miss McAvoy. Miss Eleanor Marie Robinson delivered the valedictory. The rendering of the cantata "Joan of Arc" was surprisingly good, not a hitch being evidenced, though it is rather lengthy and difficult. Miss Mary Sullivan in the role of Joan acquitted herself with merit, her voice being of fine quality. Those graduating were as follows: Miss Eleanor Marie Robinson, Miss Anna Marie Roche, Miss Grace Agnes McManus, Miss Mary Josephine Keegan, Miss Lucy Agnes Thomas, Miss Elizabeth Cecilia Judge, Miss Katherine Cecilia Hartigan, Miss Jeannette Frances Kennedy, Miss Katherine Pauline Lilly, Miss Mary Victoria Lynch, Miss Katherine Frances Tracy, Miss Mary Madeleine Cassidy, Miss Mary Elizabeth Leyden, music; Miss Mary Angela Sullivan, Miss Agnes Irene Regan, Miss Edith Teresa Harvey, Miss Elizabeth Agnes McEvoy, Miss Helena Agnes Cronin.

Town Without a Preacher.

The astounding claim is made that in Mastin, Kan., a town of 100 people, no religious services were ever held and that children as old as 16 years have never attended Sunday school or heard a sermon preached.—Kansas City Journal.

EAGLE DAILY PATTERNS.

A MODISH CIRCULAR SKIRT.

The circular skirt has held its own during the reign of plaits and is here developed in white serge. It is cut in the round length only and may be finished with or without the shaped flounce. In a skirt for general wear a dark material will be more serviceable, and especially the mohair fabrics. The flounce may be made of silk of the same shade or braid may be used as a trimming or heading.

Seven and three-quarter yards of material 36 inches wide will be required for a medium size. Pattern No. 2734 is cut in six sizes, from 22 to 32 inches waist.

A PRETTY ETON COAT.

There is nothing quite so sensible in the mind of the average woman as the short coat of this season. It is easily slipped on and off and is in no way cumbersome. The design shown is a new one and unusually trim and becoming. The front closes in a vest which is double breasted and the edges of the fronts are trimmed with narrow stitched bands. A neat velvet collar finishes the neck and gives a nice effect. This coat may be made up for a separate jacket or as part of a suit. It is suitable for development in panama cloth, sicilian linen or any of the coat cloths and is a style appropriate for any season of the year.

For a medium size this pattern requires 2 yards of 44-inch material. Pattern No. 2917 is cut in six sizes, from 32 to 42 inches bust.

In the Markets.

The weather this week has interfered materially with fishing operations. Bluefish have since been scarce and considerably dearer, at retail, up to 16 and 18 cents per pound. The effect upon the other varieties has not been so marked. Striped mackerel are 20 cents each, or about 12 cents per pound; halibut, 25 cents for Atlantic and 12 cents for Pacific captures; salmon, Pacific, 20 cents; Kennebeck, 40 cents; cod, 10 to 12 cents; porgies, weakfish, flounders, sea bass, butterfish, kingfish, perch and any pan fish are 10 cents.

The shell fish situation does not vary greatly from that of last week. Little Neck clams is the irritating feature, because dealers and consumers have acquired the impression that the high wholesale charges are arbitrarily imposed during the off-season of oysters, when small clams are alone available for the half shell service by families and at restaurants. This morning Brooklyn retail seafood dealers were compelled to pay $4 per bag, of about a bushel capacity, and in which many clams too large for half shells were mixed. Housekeepers object to paying $1.25 per 100 for Little Necks, though the sloops this morning cost the dealers about that price. Soft crabs are more numerous, but they are for the greater portion undersized. They retail at $1 to $1.25 per dozen. Lobsters are 25 cents per pound. Soft clams, 15 to 25 cents per bunch of 25. Hard clams for broth or chowder, 15 cents per 100, or a [illegible] apiece. Smoked salmon is 40 cents per pound. Halibut, 25 cents; Finnan haddies 15 cents.

New Inventions.

Busy Preserving Season.

The crusade of the pure food authorities and the educational campaign being conducted by the government's experts in Washington have brought about a change in attitude toward the [illegible]. Independently [illegible] closet, and a new vogue is promised for it during the coming year. It is to be expected, therefore, that the summer crop of preserving jar inventions and accessory contrivances will be unusually large. The [illegible] universal screw-top jar is to have a rival in the shape of a swivel cover, bail top jar, with automatic fastener. This style is illustrated herewith and is the work of a Canadian inventor.

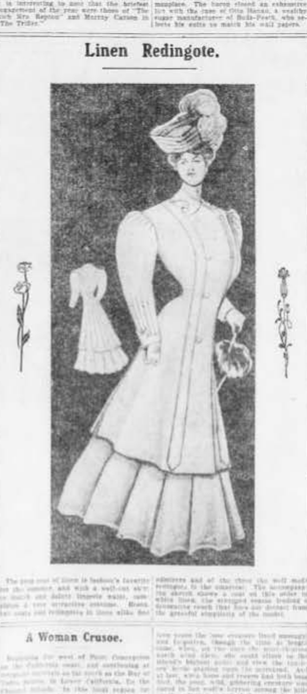
In connection therewith a fruit jar holder is shown which is intended for use with the old-style jar both for screwing and unscrewing the top. This is a simple wooden frame that clamps the jar securely, while the lid is being removed or fastened. Traction is obtained by the use of set screws. As the pressure is applied at the base of the jar, where it is best able to resist strain, the danger of breakage is reduced to a minimum.

Linen Redingote.



The long coat of linen is fashion's favorite for the summer, and with a well-cut skirt to match and dainty lingerie waist, composes a very attractive costume. [illegible] coats and redingotes in linen alike find admirers and of all the three the well-made redingote is the smartest. The accompanying sketch shows a coat on this order in white linen, the stitched seams lending a decorative touch that does not detract from the graceful simplicity of the model.

A Woman Crusoe.

Beginning far west of Point Concepcion on the California coast, and continuing at irregular intervals as far south as the Bay of Todos Santos, in Lower California, lie the Channel Islands. In this lonely region [illegible] the fisherman and the hunter may come to feel like a new Crusoe on his primitive isle. And in very truth Crusoe's semi-mythical story was enacted on one of these same islands, though minus the good Friday and the happy ending. The castaway in this case was a woman, a [illegible], left ashore through some misadventure by the crew of a vessel that had sought shelter behind San Nicholas during a storm in the early fifties. For over eighteen years the lone creature lived unmolested and forgotten, though the time is longer to-day, when, as the days the [illegible] north wind blew, she could climb to the island's highest point and view the [illegible] [illegible]. And at last, when hope and reason had both been lost, the poor, wild, gibbering creature was found in her earth's burrow among the hills by the strange crew of the otter hunters, who had long wondered at the mysterious footprints they marked upon the lonely sands.—Field and Stream.

Steal to Attend Theater.

Having found that many children were guilty of petty thefts in order to get money with which to go to the theater, Blackpool, Lancashire, is thinking of passing an ordinance forbidding children under 12 to attend theaters.

A Domestic Magician.

We have just had a domestic science graduate visiting us whose exploits call for magazine publicity. When the nose was broken off a handsome pitcher our guest immediately came to the rescue. "Don't worry," she said, "give me a tablespoon of cornstarch and another of gelatine; now, a patty pan—a little boiling water will do the rest." With the end of a match she stirred these over the fire till blended, brushed the jagged edges with the mixture and held the broken piece in place till it adhered. "If you keep hot liquids out of this pitcher it will last for years," she continued. "Gum arabic dissolved in hot water and mixed to a thick paste with plaster of Paris, in this same way, makes even a better cement." Shortly after, dire consternation reigned when a pricked finger left several ruddy drops on an evening gown which was receiving the "finishing touches." Our emergency girl dampened a small quantity of common laundry starch with water, covered the spots and spread the damaged material in the sun. In a little while the blood left the goods, coloring the starch. The quicker the remedy is applied after such an accident the more effectual it is, we were told, and also that if "old Sol" were sulking a good substitute for his rays is a hot flatiron held close over the material, with a sheet of blotting paper between the iron and the starch covered spots.—Good Housekeeping.

CHARLES SPRAGUE SMITH.

Charles Sprague Smith, whose latest likeness is given here, was born in Andover, Mass., in 1853. He was educated in Andover College, in Berlin, Paris, Rome, Madrid, Oxford and Scandinavia. He was professor of modern languages and foreign literature, 1880-91, in Columbia University, and a lecturer in that seat of learning. He organized the People's Institute and the People's Club and is the author of several well known works.

A Woman Crusoe.

Beginning due west of Point Conception on the California coast, and continuing at irregular intervals as far south as the Bay of Todos Santos, in Lower California, lie the Channel Islands. In this ideal region for the yachtsman, the fisherman, and the hunter, one comes to feel like a new Crusoe on his primitive isle. And in very truth Crusoe's semi-mythical story was enacted upon one of these same islands, though minus the man Friday and the happy ending. The castaway in this case was a woman, a Danish emigrant, left ashore through some mischance by the crew of a vessel that had sought shelter behind San Nicholas during a storm, in the early fifties. For over seventeen years the lone creature lived unsought and forgotten, though the time at length come, when, on the days the mist-clearing north wind blew, she could climb to the island's highest point and view the ranchers' herds grazing upon the mainland. And at last, when hope and reason had both long died, the poor, wild, gibbering creature was found in her wolf's burrow among the hills by the advance guard of the otter hunters' fraternity, who had long wondered at the mysterious footprints they marked upon the lonely sands.—Field and Stream.
