

STORY OF LOST WOMAN BETOLD

*Legend of San Nicolas Island
Revived in Ceremony*

Plaque Placed in Grounds of Santa Barbara Mission

Church and Laity Combine in Paying Late Tribute

SANTA BARBARA, Feb. 27.—On of the greatest honors it is possi awarded Juana Maria, "The Lost Woman of San Nicolas Island" when the Daughters of the American

Brosseau, president-general, mission fathers and laymen placed plaque in her memory in the gar-

those who gathered for the ceremony heard once again the story of sacrifice and peril of the old

The story told of the missionaries pressing all the Indians into service in Santa Barbara and then permitting the Indian Indians

Barbara, San Nicolas was left alone until 1835, when the only large schooner on the coast visited the island and brought the twenty survivors.

As they drew away from the shore, one of the women realized that her baby was not on board.

The natives were distributed

Gate before an opportunity came to return for the woman who made such a sacrifice.

ish settlement here. Fifteen years later, fishermen after sea otters reported having seen a figure running up and down the beach of Sa-

Capt. George Nidever, whose son still lives here, fitted out a ship and left for San Nicolas, but warded with a footprint of a slender foot in the sand. For days the island was searched, and the woman was found. After attempting received each with dignity. She was brought to Santa Barbara and placed in the care of Capt. Nicolson's Spanish wife. She could

Before a month had elapsed, his new life and mode of living so a the mission fathers christened her Juana Maria, and she was buried in the old mission grounds.

her child probably had been killed by wild dogs before she could leave the ship which first attempted to remove her from San Nicolas.

Huntington Park Club to Be Host

HUNTINGTON PARK, Feb. 27. The Kiwanis Club of Huntington Park has a fourth birthday ann celebrate the occasion, a party has been arranged to be given Wednesday night at the Deauville clubhouse in Santa Monica, when more than

On this occasion, past Lieutenant Governors Frank Whitelock of Berkeley and Phil McCann of Long Beach and "Pat" Millikan, present lie

D. Brawley, Charles Hedgcock, L. Charles Cowgill and Louis H. Hamilton, past presidents of the local master of ceremonies; "Pat" Millikan, toastmaster; Joseph W. Foley of Pasadena, principal speaker, and J. D. Buchanan will give the history.

program will be given by the Whittier College Male Quartet. Following the program, there will be dancing and cards.

Recall Hearing Set for Today

HUNTINGTON PARK, Feb. 27. Dealing with local political affairs, a case of great interest is set for

Superior Court Judge Walter Gatt at 10 o'clock.
The case concerns two petitions being filed with the City Clerk and checked, asking that successors selected to take the places of Jeron

At the Council meeting last Monday night, a restraining order, issued by the court, was presented before the Council session, proven

The City Clerk and members of the Council are summoned to appear before the court tomorrow on the petitions.

TROLLEY POLES PLACED

thousands of creosoted ties have been distributed along the electric line right of way of the Pacific

Lucena Pass. This is the first general renovation of the line since the original installation about sixteen years ago.

الحمد لله الذي جعلنا من عباده المخلصين

reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.

STORY OF LOST WOMAN RETOLD

*Legend of San Nicolas Island
Revived in Ceremony*

Plaque Placed in Grounds of Santa Barbara Mission

Church and Laity Combine in Paying Late Tribute

SANTA BARBARA, Feb. 27.—One of the greatest honors it is possible to bestow on a human being — posthumous recognition — was awarded Juana Maria, "The Lost Woman of San Nicolas Island," when the Daughters of the American Revolution, led by Mrs. Alfred Brosseau, president-general, mission fathers and laymen placed a plaque in her memory in the gardens of the old mission here. And those who gathered for the ceremony heard once again the story of sacrifice and peril of the old woman.

The story told of the mission fathers pressing all the Indians into service in Santa Barbara and then recruiting the island Indians. Because of its distance from Santa Barbara, San Nicolas was left alone until 1835, when the only large schooner on the coast visited the island and brought the twenty surviving Indians away from their native land.

As they drew away from the live land.

As they drew away from the shore, one of the women realized that her baby was not on board, and after frantically appealing in vain to the captain to turn back, she jumped overboard and disappeared in the waves.

The natives were distributed among the various missions, and the ship itself was wrecked near Golden Gate before an opportunity came to return for the woman who made such a sacrifice.

The woman of San Nicolas became part of the lore of the Spanish settlement here. Fifteen years later, fishermen after sea otters reported having seen a figure running up and down the beach of San Nicolas again arousing interest in the legend of the lost woman.

Capt. George Nidever, whose son still lives here, fitted out a ship and left for San Nicolas, but failed to find any traces of her until his third trip, when he was rewarded with a footprint of a slender foot in the sand. For days the island was searched, and the woman was found. After attempting to flee, she changed her mind and received each with dignity. She was brought to Santa Barbara and placed in the care of Capt. Nidever's Spanish wife. She could speak only in sign language, as there were few, if any, of her own tribe living then on the coast.

Before a month had elapsed, her new life and mode of living so affected her that she became ill and died. Just before she died, one of the mission fathers christened her Juana Maria, and she was buried in the old mission grounds.

Juana Maria had pictured to Mrs. Nidever through signs, that her child probably had been killed by wild dogs before she could leave the ship which first attempted to remove her from San Nicolas.